Fish Biting, Wages Up.
Police and Muezzin Call.
Crime Still Plentiful.
Iceland's Old Volcano.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MIAMI, April 2.—The President sends Easter greetings from Vincent Astor's boat and indicates that the fish are biting.

General Johnson sends back word that all soft coal miners hereafter will work only seven hours a day and be paid five dollars for seven hours instead of four dollars and sixty cents for eight hours. All employers will be forced to pay alike, so there is no hardship, except for those that buy coal.

Some good operator should find a way to get more coal for less work. There have been many improvements in production since the days when English women used to drag small coal cars through the low-roofed mine passages on their hands and knees.

Eventually coal will be burned in the mine, transported as electric power on copper wires, no coal cars. That will present a new NRA problem.

General Johnson also has to report increased wages for four hundred thousand steel workers, amounting to four million dollars a month, with many other steel men soon to benefit. You can buy many pairs of shoes and barrels of flour for $48,000,000.

In old days raising wages and shortening hours in hopes of better business would have been called putting the cart before the horse, but it may be the right idea. Putting the eye in the point of the needle, instead of the far end seemed once a queer idea, but it made the sewing machine possible.

IN ISTANBUL, Samuel Insull still struggles against a return to this country, that was the mecca of all his hopes, when, long ago, he came from England and found work with Thomas A. Edison.

The muezzin calls out, "God is god, and Mohamed is his prophet." The Turkish policeman calls on Mr. Insull, saying, "Please come ashore, we would like to arrest you, on behalf of Uncle Sam."

MR INSULL pays as little attention to one as to the other. He does not believe that Mohamed is anybody's prophet, he does not want to be arrested.

Leaving out high morality, it would not be a bad idea if Kemal Pasha should say to Mr. Insull, "We want to own our own gas and electric plant, come and show us how."

Mr. Insull could show them, and doubtless would, in return for safety.

BREMERTON, state of Washington, reports six bodies, two women, four men, found bound, gagged, beaten, shot to death in a house ransacked by thieves.

DILLINGER, escaped convict, much-feared gangster and killer, was nearly caught in St. Paul. He would have been caught had he not frightened federal agents out of all idea of capturing him. The agents who fired guns or pistols from around the corner of a brick building think they saw drops of blood, but it was not theirs. Perhaps there was none.

Dillinger and a man with him kept the federal agents terrorized, afraid to come out from their corner, while a red-haired woman, between the two firing parties, calmly backed the bandit's car out of a garage and drove Dillinger away.

NOTHING IS safe, nothing sure. In Iceland, one hundred and fifty-five miles east of Reykjavik, there stood a calm mountain known to have been a bad volcano in its younger years, called Skeidararjoekull Cirka, a thick cap of ice covering the summit, every sign of reformed old age.

Inhabitants of Nupsstad Village, close by the peak, in Skaptafellsbysla, felt certain that in Skeidararjoekull Cirka's wild oats had all been sown. They had not.

The old volcano has blown the ice cap into cracked ice, and with lightning flashes and roarings is in violent eruption.

JAPAN PRESENTS strange murder plots from time to time not based on plunder, revenge, hate, or any personal meanness, but on political ideas.

One such plot recently got rid of a high official, disapproved by young army officers who thought he was influencing the Mikado to Japan's disadvantage.

The latest plot, widespread, with confessions obtained, planned the assassination of numerous important personages, statesmen and financiers of the dominant political party, who advise the emperor.

THESE STATESMEN of the Seiyukai are enlightened men of the modern school, and offensive to some that advocate a conservative old school dictatorship, subservient to the Mikado, of course. No plot is ever aimed at him. The plotters take, perhaps too seriously, their belief that conquest of the western world, with punishment for the so-called "egotism of the white race," would be easy for Japan.

The Japanese are a wonderful people. The arrested plotters will face death as calmly as they would face a picnic, but no conquest is sure in these airplane, poison gas days. Poison gas will eat the lungs of a brave man as quickly as those of a coward, and you cannot run from it.

WIFE SPURNS FREED CONVICT

BURGETTSTOWN, Pa., April 2.—The world which looked rosy to James Johnson, 49, 10 days ago when he was released after a four-year term in Western Penitentiary, looked black again today.

His 23-year-old wife, Ruth, whom he had charged with bigamy, refused to return to him when given her choice before Justice of the Peace Steve Dugan today.

The wife was dismissed and told she must either return to her husband or obtain a divorce and marry Philip Stevens, Atlasburg mine machinist, with whom she testified she had been living for nine months.

Mrs. Johnson said:

"I like my second man best and will try to get a divorce and marry him."

She went to live temporarily with her mother, Mrs. Wilma Couch, a widow, of Burgettstown.

7,000 at Imperial Mine Celebration

Seven thousand members of the United Mine Workers of America today commemorated "John Mitchell" day with a mass meeting at Imperial. Philip Murray, international vice president of the union; Pat Fagan, president of District No. 5, and William Hargest, secretary-treasurer, spoke. The Ingram Volunteer Fire Department band played.

Man Stabbed, 2 Shot As 75,000 Celebrate Labor Victories

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 2.—Violence flared in the Fayette coal fields today as a huge army of miners, estimated at between 50,000 and 75,000, celebrated the thirty-sixth anniversary of gaining the eight-hour day.

The miners held three gigantic demonstrations.

A series of clashes between rival union members and between union and non-union men resulted in a stabbing and two shootings and led to the assigning of an extra force of state police to guard against widespread disorders.

Uniontown, California and Greensburg were the scenes of the mass meetings and the largest of the three was held at Uniontown.

UNIONTOWN JAMMED

By auto, by truck, by railroad and street car an endless stream of humanity poured into the city and filled the streets with the largest crowd in Uniontown's history.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor, led 15,000 miners in a five-mile-long parade and later addressed the mass meeting. Thomas Kennedy, of Hazelton, international secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, also spoke.

Later Mrs. Pinchot addressed the mass meetings at Greensburg and at California. At Greensburg 12,000 miners participated in a parade and rally, the first demonstration of its kind ever held in Greensburg under the auspices of the United Mine Works of America.

GUN, KNIFE BATTLES

Most serious of the disturbances occurred at Footedale, about five miles from Uniontown, where Winfred Harshman was beaten on the head with a gun butt and John Chambers, 45, was shot. In another clash at Footedale last night, Benny Shimshock, Jr., 15, a spectator, was shot.

At Vesta, Steve Musik, 29, was stabbed last night and is in Brownsville Hospital in a critical condition. Adam Goletko, of Vesta, was arrested.

The huge demonstrations commemorated the eight-hour day under the leadership of John Mitchell, early president of the United Mine Workers.

Anthracite Miners Mark 8-Hour Day

HAZLETON, Pa., April 2.—(AP.)—Mine workers throughout the anthracite fields remained idle today in observance of the anniversary of the granting of the eight-hour day in the coal industry years ago.

'Harmony' Fails in G. O. P.

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, April 2.—Republican organization leaders in a three hour conference failed to reach any agreement on a candidate to be supported for the gubernatorial nomination.

As the last minute for withdrawal neared, it was evident that not more than four or five of the 18 candidates who filed petitions would withdraw, the only notable one being State Chairman Edward Martin.

Edward J. Hunter, of the Workmen's Compensation Board, withdrew as a candidate this afternoon. He is a follower of Gov. Pinchot.

Martin presided at today's conference and made an earnest plea for Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon. His words failed to stir Auditor General Frank E. Baldwin, Representative John Flynn of Elk County, representing the interests of former Senator Joseph R. Grundy, and the majority of the conferees.

COYNE ATTENDS

In the conference in addition to the men named were Senator John Howell, of Lackawanna; Senator James J. Coyne, of Allegheny; Senator Harry B. Scott, of Centre, a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Shannon.

Gen. Martin when he withdraws is expected to issue a statement designed toward party harmony, but that seems a vain hope.

Former Mayor John S. Herron, of Pittsburgh, this afternoon withdrew as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, indicating that the organization might not slate a gubernatorial candidate from the East.

Representatives of all the major candidates were in Harrisburg today. None would admit the possession of withdrawal papers, but it is understood that such documents are here for almost the whole field, to be filed in the event there should be some magical ac-

MORITZ TO ACT AS MAGISTRATE

Theodore L. Moritz, the Mayor's secretary, today was thrown into the breach to make up fa shortage in city police magistrates.

Moritz was appointed by the Mayor and confirmed by Council after His Honor told Council that it was just too much for him to handle all the police court benches himself in emergencies. The appointment is temporary. McNair told Counsil:

"There are only two magistrates now functioning. I had four courts to handle this morning. I ask that you appoint a magistrate temporarily until I can secure someone else. I'd like to appoint my secretary. He could take a couple of police courts so I would only need to handle a couple myself."

Garland Takes Steps To Clear 'Deadwood' From Payroll

Smarting under censure of the League of Women Voters that the city government "reeks with unnecessary jobs," Council President Robert Garland today moved to place the entire responsibility for payroll pruning on department heads.

Garland prepared a resolution for introduction this afternoon calling on department chiefs to present amending ordinances from time to time, cutting out any "dead wood" found on the payroll.

PASSED TO HEADS

In a statement the Council President made it plain that in his opinion the League of Women Voters had a proper complaint but that the remedy lay with the administrative officers and not with Council.

He himself had no knowledge of the personnel necessary to conduct the business of the various departments, Garland asserted. The directors had such information and they should act, he declared.

Garland said he had not consulted other members of Council regarding the move. All were condemned by the league for passing the salary ordinance over the veto of Mayor McNair.

MAGEE BACKED MAYOR

Councilman W. A. Magee alone voted to sustain the Mayor's veto. The Mayor in his veto message had excoriated Council for failure to slash the 1934 budget.

In explaining his resolution, Garland said:

"This resolution should be satisfactory to the League of Women Voters, who, in the interest of the taxpayers generally, had a proper complaint to make.

"The payroll of the city must, in many places, be top heavy, and this can only be properly remedied by the administrative

The body of an unidentified man, who had in his pocket a bit of palm, indicating he had been at church on Palm Sunday, was found floating in the Monongahela River at South Second street today. He was well dressed, about 45 years old, wore a dark grey suit and high shoes, and had no upper teeth. The body was found by Joseph A. McKee, of 220 McKean street.

'ALL ALONE,' FINANCIER WAILS

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(AP.)—Turkey today notified the United States that Samuel Insull would be extradited to Chicago to stand trial.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

ISTANBUL, April 2.—An ancient jail in old Stamboul opened its gates today for Samuel Insull, the modern man without a country, who for nearly two years has led the United States government a chase over almost half the world.

Meanwhile the Turkish National Assembly today ratified the extradition treaty with the United States, making possible the immediate return of Insull to face trial in America.

Arrest of the 74-year-old financier, under indictment in Chicago for violation of the federal bankruptcy laws, was ordered by Prosecutor Kenan Bey upon instructions from the Turkish cabinet at Angora, the capital. Insull was taken into custody at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon (9:30 a. m. E. S. T.).

FACE BLANCHES

His face blanched when officers told him he must go to jail. His shoulders sagged and he appeared old and broken. He seemed to those who saw him as he was taken off to prison to have aged 10 years since morning.

Insull was taken to the detention house in old Stamboul, which is the ancient section of the city, where once the Sultan of Turkey lived in Oriental splendor.

Arrest of Insull came as a dramatic climax to three days of uncertainty. Turkish officials had been uncertain what to do with him. Insull had been uncertain as to what his fate was to be.

KEEPS UP FIGHT

Just what will happen is still unknown. Insull may be held in jail for many weeks until officers come from the United States to

U. S. STEEL HEAD DEFENDS NRA

HOBOKEN, N. J., April 2.—(AP.)—Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, told the annual stockholders' meeting today that he believed the corporation had written "one of the brightest pages in corporate history" in the treatment of its employes during the depression.

This observation followed criticism of the management by some stockholders of the corporation's acceptance of the NRA code.

Taylor defended the code both on the score of its fairness to employes and because of the opportunity it afforded the steel industry to achieve stabilized conditions through co-operative relationship.

Taylor said that no one "could give an intelligent answer, backed by logic," as to whether the NRA was responsible for the recent economic improvement, "or whether it was the play of natural forces."

Taylor said increases in his own remuneration after 1929 had been voted by the board of directors because of the work he had done in readjusting the company's financial structure, including the retirement of funded debt.

Farrell, defending payment of about $99,000 as a bonus in 1932, the year of his retirement, stated that in the "25 or 30 years" he worked for United States Steel he had had only four vacations and had not received extra compensation.

Girl Mother-to-Be Jailed as Slayer

BYLLESBY FIRM HIT IN PROBE

By M. L. RAMSAY
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Evidence that the great Insull and Byllesby power systems united to smash a consumers' rate reduction suit in Oklahoma, by hiring the attorney who was championing the consumers, was disclosed at the Federal Trade Commission yesterday.

The attorney, Campbell Russell, was fighting to cut the rates of the Byllesby subsidiary serving Oklahoma City, according to letters unearthed by the commission in Insull files. An Insull company hired Russell at $5,000 a year, while the Byllesby interests, a letter said, "agreed to pay three-fourths of his salary."

Disclosure of this Oklahoma deal, with which "Mr. Insull was very much pleased," came as utility reform forces here and in New York pressed for a thorough-going investigation of power system activity in politics.

DEMAND FOR PROBE

Will Rogers' Fall At Polo Harmless

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—(INS.)—Hundreds of spectators today still were marveling at the miraculous manner in which Will Rogers, film comedian, escaped serious injuries when he was knocked from his horse in a polo game won by his Riveroos from "Big Boy" Williams' Greyhounds, 8-6.

U. S. Seeks Return Of Reformed Felon

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(INS.)—Despite many protests from Canadian sources, extradition proceedings have been started against Frank Grigware, alias James Lawrence Fahey, of Edmonton, Alberta, who escaped from Leavenworth prison in 1910, and later established himself as a respected citizen of the Dominion.

Ossifying Boy Has Easter Gift Revel

International News Service.

WILKES-BARRE, April 2.—Seven-year-old Benny Hendricks, whose body is slowly turning into stone as the result of a rare malady, today reigned supreme over a world of his own in the orthopedic ward of the Wilkes-Barre General Hospital.

Clutching some of his gifts that have come to him from all over the country since his condition was made known, Benny was a happy boy today for the first time in months. There were scores of messages of sympathy and one from a well-known radio team that seemed to give him unusual pleasure. Propped up in a chair, he beamed:

"Well, I'm satisfied now. The doctor let me eat two Easter bunnies yesterday. I don't think I'll want any more now. I'm going to give the rest away, to the other children and to the nurses."

Greatly perturbed at the publicity the child's case has attracted, Dr. Smith refused to allow Dr. George B. Dorff, of New York, a noted specialist, to examine the boy. Dr. Dorff volunteered his services to the New York American and flew here by plane yesterday afternoon.

Pittsburgh Sufferer Sends Lad Dollar And Cheery Letter

"Dear Little Benjamin:

"I am sending you a dollar so your mother can buy you something for Easter from me because you are such a brave little 7-year-old boy. I, too, am in the hospital, so we both know what it means to be sick.

"Hope you have a happy Easter and that God will make you well even faster than he will me, because you are only a little fellow who likes to play and I am grown up and don't care about playing any more. Keep smiling, dear little boy. All the great men in the world have been brave."

Girl, 9, Awaits Stork In Rescue Mission

International News Service.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 2.—Nine-year-old Francisca Aniles, a ward of the Fresno Juvenile Court, is an expectant mother, according to authorities.

Birth of the girl's child at the Salvation Army Rescue and Maternity Home, where Francisca was sent by Fresno juvenile authorities, is expected within a month.

The girl's common-law husband is in San Quentin Prison, juvenile court authorities reported. His name was withheld. An official said:

"The little girl can neither read nor write. She has had little if any schooling, almost no home life. She is somewhat large and matured for her age."

Dr. May Wilmer, superintendent of the Salvation home, said that in her experience she knew of no case in the United States where a girl younger than 9 years was a mother.

ICKES, TUGWELL AND RICHBERG FACE 'RED' INQUIRY

KANSAN CITES NRA LEADERS' 'REVOLUTION'

Rep. M'Gugin Declares Program Explains Wirt Charges

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A demand that four of the highest officials of the administration's recovery machine be summoned before the special Wirt investigating committee was made today by Representative McGugin (Rep.), of Kansas. They are:

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell, a potent figure in the Agricultural Relief Administration.

Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes, in charge of spending the $3,300,000,000 Public Works Fund.

Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the Tennessee Valey Authority.

McGugin charged that the above-named "have flouted the will of Congress by using their power and funds for purposes foreign to the American form of government."

He will ask the committee named to investigate Dr. William A. Wirt's charges against "Brain Trusters" to call them.

This committee will be named Wednesday, according to Speaker of the House Rainey. Representative Bulwinkle (Dem.), North Carolina, will head it.

McGugin's categorical proposals are:

"1—Tugwell: In a Philadelphia speech he said the government is engaged in a program to control the land. I would ask him under what law are you proceeding to control the land? Congress hasn't enacted any such legislation.

"REVOLUTION ACHIEVED"

"2—Donald R. Richberg: In many speeches he has said the revolution has been achieved. I would ask him in what manner that was done.

"3—Secretary of Interior Ickes: Is he using PWA funds to care for unemployment or to finance nationalistic and socialistic projects he has had in mind for years, and which Congress rejected?

"4—Chairman Morgan: It would ask if the Tennessee Valley Authority is for the purpose of supplying power at Muscle Shoals or nationalizing industry and socializing the people of East Tennessee.

SEES PROJECTS AS ELASTIC

"You can examine every one of the major recovery projects and you will find that they have been created ostensibly for one purpose and are being used for another."

Meantime Representative Foulkes (Dem.) of Michigan, who has assailed Dr. Wirt, said he had received a letter from another Indiana educator saying that Dr. Wirt receives a salary of $13,000 a year as superintendent of schools in Gary, Ind., or $3,000 more than the city superintendent of Indianapolis, a city three times as large. He added:

"In addition to this, he was on the State Board of Education and received per diem allowance and expenses, and also was paid $10,000 per trip each year for work in the New York schools, according to this letter."

Gary Educator Ready to Appear

GARY, Ind., April 2.—(INS.)—Dr. William A. Wirt, superintendent of schools, today said he was ready to appear before a congressional committee and explain his charges that certain administration "brain trust" members have been planning to subvert the Constitution of the United States.

Dr. Wirt expects to be called to Washington this week to testify before such a committee.

Automobile Makers Boost Car Prices

NEW YORK, April 2.—(INS.)—Chrysler Corporation today took the lead in instituting a general price rise on automobiles as a result of the boost in wages and cut in hours announced by the industry 10 days ago.

Plymouth Motor Car Corporation, Chrysler subsidiary, increased list prices $25 to $45 a car, effective today. Dodge, another Chrysler unit, announced increases of $45 a car. Studebaker followed this action with increases ranging from $125 to $500.

FIXES RESPONSIBILITY

"I have no personal knowledge of the personnel necessary to conduct the work in these lean times in any of the bureaus, and the directors under the new administration should assume full responsibility.

"The directors have now been in harness for three months. They should have acquired by this time an acquaintance with the work to be done.

"They should know where there is dead wood. They should know where there is inefficiency, and it is up to them to act. It will then be Council's duty to do its part in carrying out those pre-election promises to support economy and efficiency in government, which every member of the body made."

TAX REPORTS ASKED

Garland also will present a resolution this afternoon requiring the Treasurer to make reports twice a month on tax collections, showing the sources from which the money has come.

Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston was in revolt against the 1934 salary ordinance. He had recommended dismissal of more than 100 employes. Council instead substituted the "stagger" system of employment.

JOHNSTON FLAYS PLAN

Johnston declared the furloughs would hamper the work of his department. Defiant, he said:

"I won't do it. I won't go along unless Council forces me to do it, and then the responsibility isn't mine."

Johston said he would send amendments to the salary bill to Council this week without which his department cannot function efficiently.

WALLACE OPENS DAIRY DRIVE

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—(AP.)—Secretary Wallace opened today a drive which he said would place dairy production on a more economical and sounder basis. He also criticized proposals for regimentation of agriculture. Wallace's appearance here opened a nation-wide series of discussions of the proposed dairy production control plan.

Dairy producers from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and West Virginia heard the Agriculture Secretary concede frankly that the proposed plan does not pretend to offer any miraculous return of prosperity to the dairy farmer.

What it does seek to accomplish, Wallace said, is to place dairy production on a more economical and sounder basis and, in general, to promote public confidence in the dairy industry. He said:

"I think it will be necessary for the dairy industry to continue to place its reliance upon recovery in consumer buying power, possibly with the necessary control on production, to prevent the extreme flexibility of the industry from stepping up its output too rapidly in response to higher prices."

The proposed plan would have each dairyman reduce his production 10 per cent under average production for 1932 and 1933, in return for benefit payments of 40 cents per pound of butterfat reduced.

Wallace again expressed his skepticism as to compulsory control of farm production. He added:

"I think we must look forward to more and more reliance upon voluntary co-operation among farmers, and view proposals for regimentation with skepticism, at least until experiment proves their worth."

California Bans Parrot Shipments

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—(INS.)—Forbidding the shipment of parrots or parakeets from California indefinitely, the State Department of Health today ordered an investigation to locate the source of psittacosis or "parrot fever," which assertedly caused several deaths in Pittsburgh recently.

The parakeets blamed for the Pittsburgh deaths were reported to have been shipped from Los Angeles.

Bequest Repays Loan to Actress

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—(AP.)—For loans Lady Forbes-Robertson, Bedford Square, London, assertedly made to her during her career as a stage actress here and abroad, Mrs. Susanne Perry Miller, who died last March 10, bequeathed her $3,500, a petition for probate of Mrs. Miller's will disclosed today.

The will also provided $3,500 for Maxine Elliott, stage beauty of two decades ago.

CONGRESS PAYS POU TRIBUTE

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(AP.)—Congress dedicated itself today to an unusual tribute to the man who was its oldest member in point of service—the late Representative Edward W. Pou, Democrat, from Smithfield, N. C.

The veteran of 17 consecutive terms in the House died at his hotel apartment early yesterday of a heart attack after weeks of suffereing from influenza. He was 70.

Chairman of the powerful Rules Committee, intimate friend of the late President Woodrow Wilson and of many leading statesmen of the last three deceades, Mr. Pou received homage from his colleagues today. Vice President Garner and Speaker Rainey summoned the Senate and House into joint session for an impressive ceremony.

A White House message accompanied by flowers was received by Mrs. Pou.

OXFORD DEBUT JOLT FOR MAE

International News Service.

OXFORD, Eng., April 2.—Mae West, who is as much a favorite with English film fans as with those in the United States, suffered her first set-back in Great Britain today.

Miss Lily Tawney, prim 50-year-old Mayoress of Oxford, refused to attend the gala opening here tonight of "I'm No Angel," although the opening coincides with the dedication of Oxford's newest cinema, at which the Mayoress was scheduled to participate in an official capacity. Said the official:

"In my official capacity I cannot patronize anything likely to give offense to a number of people."

Uniontown Rabbi Named Aide Here

The board of trustees of Rodef Shalom Congregation today announced that Rabbi Henry E. Kagan, of Temple Israel, Uniontown, had been named assistant rabbi at the Pittsburgh congregation. He will assume his new duties in September, shortly after duties in September, a month after Dr. Solomon B. Freehof, of Chicago, becomes rabbi of the temple, succeeding Acting Rabbi B. B. Glazer, who goes to New York to become assistant to Dr. S. H. Goldenson.

Rabbi Kagan is a graduate of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, and the University of Cincinnati, and is a director of the Hillel foundation at the University of West Virginia.

Mother Breaks Neck, Son Dies in Flames

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., April 2.—Two persons were killed and one injured at Stewartsville today when an oil stove exploded. Mrs. James Spence, 45, died of a broken neck when she leaped from a second story window with her seven-year-old son. The latter was injured. She had attempted to arouse another son, Ross, 17, who burned to death in bed.

CONGRESS ACTS TO PLUG TAX BILL LEAKS

Rates Made Lighter On Small Incomes By Measure

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Congress is making a real effort in the next tax bill to halt all leaks in the revenue laws through which rich men have avoided or evaded income tax payments, Senator Harrison (Dem.), of Mississippi, told the Senate this afternoon in opening debate on the measure.

RATES LIGHTER

He said the new income tax rates were made lighter on small incomes, by an allowance on earned incomes. He said most of the 330 million dollars new revenue to be raised by the bill would come from tightening loopholes, through which taxes has been avoided in recent years.

Harrison explained the Senate bill would raise 70 million dollars more than the House bill, or a total of 330 milions. The Senate increase would come mainly from a capital stock tax, he said, which is expected to raise 95 million dollars a year. He said:

"All this additional revenue is badly needed by the federal government in view of the heavy emergency expenses which must be met.

MORE REVENUE SEEN

"Although I should like to see the elimination of many of the excise or nuisance taxes, I do not believe it is feasible to eliminate them earlier than July 1, 1935, which is the date on which many of them will be automatically repealed.

"The President in his budget message anticipated additional revenues of approximately 150 million dollars from the changes proposed to be made by the new revenue bill. The bill as reported to the Senate complies with a slight margin for safety.

"The committee did not change the income tax rate schedule provided for in the House bill but did decide that additional recognition should be given to earned income. The House bill provided for a cerdit against net income for purposes of the normal tax equal to 10 per cent of the amount of the taxpayer's earned income up to $8,000. The committee has increased this maximum to $30,000."

cord which would pave the way for Republican organization unity.

Gen. Martin today reiterated the statement he made in Pittsburgh Saturday afternoon, that there would be no centralization by the organization at the close of the Election Bureau this afternoon.

PHILLIPS STOCK GAINS

Many of the leaders intend to remain here for two or three days, and efforts then will be made to get at least a semblance of concerted strength behind a single candidate. The stock of former Congressman Thomas W. Phillips of Butler has risen with organization groups in the past two days, though his candidacy would not be approved by the immediate circle of Senator David A. Reed.

Judge Robert E. Lamberton, Philadelphia, Attorney-General William A. Schnader, Lieutenant Governor Edward Shannon and Judge Marion D. Patterson of Blair County, form with Phillips what has come to be known as the "Big Five" of the eighteen tentative candidates for the Republican nomination.

Pinchot forces in the past few days have been trying to compose the differences in their own ranks, caused by the filing of Edward J. Hunter, member of the Workmen's Compensation Board.

Gov. Pinchot himself is understood to have taken a hand in the effort to get Hunter out, so the Pinchot lieutenants can center on Schanader.

SCHEDULED TO RETURN

The Governor is scheduled to return to his office Wednesday of this week, but the manner in which his return has been delayed from time to time has made politicians outside his camp skeptical.

Duncan McCallum, the Governor's secretary, is taking a leave of absence, starting tonight, for the duration of the campaign, and will transfer his activities to Pinchot headquarters in Philadelphia, from where the Governor's campaign for the senatorial nomination will be directed.

Senator James J. Coyne conferred with Martin and other Republican chiefs today, but the Senator was chiefly concerned about withdrawals which might occur in some legislative districts in Allegheny County and the Thirty-second Congressional District, where he is supporting Congressman M. J. Muldowney for re-election.

Maurice H. Bloom, Pittsburgh, withdrew as a Republican candidate for the United States Senatorial nomination, and John R. Frankel, an assistant district attorney, and Jacob Kalson retired as candidates for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Thirty-second District.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

PERSEVERANCE

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The mild demeanor of State Secretary Hull is deceiving.

Behind it he hides the heart of a Canadian Northwest policeman. He always gets his man.

This time the man is none other than President Roosevelt's own special foreign trade adviser, George Peek. When Mr. Peek's appointment was announced, it was generally assumed around the State Department that Mr. Hull's influence on that subject was on the wane. Mr. Peek was supposed to be the big influence on foreign trade, over-riding the executive commercial policy committee started by Mr. Hull.

Mr. Hull said nothing, but was annoyed. A week ago the White House gave out an executive order formally installing Mr. Peek and giving him $100,000 to work with.

The laugh was on Mr. Hull—but not for long.

RETRIBUTION

Why its announcement was delayed 48 hours was not explained, but the fact is that by that time Mr. Roosevelt was out on the Astor yacht, out of reach of Mr. Peek, and everyone else.

This supplemental order specifically instructed Mr. Peek NOT to interfere with the executive policy committee. It did not say directly, but clearly implied that Mr. Peek was also not to interfere with Mr. Hull, and gave Mr. Hull the right to name a representative on the policy committee.

The inner departmental circlers nudged each other and allowed that many influential persons have found it distinctly unprofitable to step on Mr. Hull's toes. He is decidedly not a Mr. Milquetoast.

NRA

Those on the inside at the NRA are talking among themselves about the radical changes which have been quietly going on within the organization.

For instance, W. Averill Harriman has virtually taken the entire routine off General Johnson's shoulders during the last few weeks. He appears to be running the show since he was made First Assistant Administrator.

One job Johnson has taken on recently is the writing of office orders. They are supposed to be more secret than a Supreme Court decision. If anyone is caught disclosing an order outside the organization it constitutes grounds for dismissal.

Lately the orders have been more picturesquely worded than when they were written by Executive Director Alvin Brown.

OPPOSITION

These and other signs have led to considerable discussion as to the future of the NRA. Some wise boys are saying the outfit will grow less and less important. They expect that a compliance drive will be started soon by the Legal Division. The show will then center around technical individual cases of enforcement. Any broad further curtailment of hours seems to be out of the question.

The tendency of the Administration is to temporize with the existing set-up and await developments in hopes that more reforms may be forced later.

But industry is getting its back up. It is organizing quite effectively backstage against the Wagner Labor Board Bill. Three of the largest industries have sent letters to all stockholders urging them to campaign actively against the measure.

They will probably be able to block it for this session.

REGRETS

The White House crowd took the defeat on the Veterans' Pay Restoration Bill very hard. Their advance information was to the effect that the Senate would save them by sustaining the veto.

It is rather important politically, but not financially.

When the figures are all in, June 30, you will find that Mr. Roosevelt's budget estimate of this year's deficit will be just about half what he thought it would be. He has been unable to spend money as fast as he estimated.

The condition of the Treasury will not be seriously affected by the $228,000,000 additional expense of the veterans' pay restorations.

That is only a drop in a seven billion dollar budget bucket.

HITLER

The inner gang at the State Department believes it is going to be a long time before anyone gets any money out of Berlin.

German gold reserves, according to its calculations, are only 8 per cent of her total currency outstanding. Her gold position is so bad she cannot pay for current foreign purchases and has slashed an embargo on cotton, wool, etc.

Hitler's diplomats have been sounding us out on a proposition whereby they would pay in kind for their domestic purchases. That means we would have to buy in Germany as much as they buy here.

We will not fall for that one.

TRICK

There is more than a desire for reform behind this Democratic movement for revision of the electoral college system.

If they succeed, the Republicans may never get back in the White House.

The Constitutional amendment approved by Mr. Roosevelt the other day provides that the electoral vote of each state be split in accordance with the popular vote. For instance, Hoover carried Pennsylvania last year with a total vote of 1,453,540, against Roosevelt's 1,295,948, and thus won the whole block of 36 electoral votes.

Under the proposed amendment, Pennsylvania's electoral vote would have been about 20 for Hoover and 16 for Roosevelt.

It would mean that the Democrats would get electoral votes out of their minority representation in normally Republican states, but would lose little in their stronghold, the solid South, where Republican voting is nil.

REVISION LOOMS FOR SECURITIES MEASURE

Both Bills to Retain 'Teeth,' House Leader Says

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Both the securities act passed by Congress in the special session and the present stock market bill will be modified, Chairman Rayburn (Dem.), of Texas, of the House Interstate Committee, announced today.

The revision in each case, he indicated, will be limited and the administration is standing pat on the essentials of both measures.

Rayburn defended the securities bill which is under attack from the United States Chamber of Commerce and the American Bar Association.

The stock market bill, he said, will be reported out by the Interstate Commerce Committee this week and passage sought in the House next week.

Disclosing plans to amend the securities act, Rayburn said:

"It is not true that the securities act is preventing the sale of securities—it is the lack of a market. The liability section has been lied about by men who won't tell the truth about anything.

"These vicious attacks on the securities act, trying to tear it up by the roots, are not going to get anywhere. There will be minor changes in the securities act, but no general revision?

The securities act amendment, it is understood, will be made a rider to the stock market bill. It is reported that provisions making officers of corporations liable for acts of omission will be softened.

U. S. Chamber in New Drive on Stock Act

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(INS.)—Continuing its attack on the securities act, the United States Chamber of Commerce today made public the findings of its investigating committee terming it "prohibitory to normal financial transactions" and recommending its immediate revision.

One member of the committee, William V. Hodges, of Denver, Col., wrote a supplementary report questioning the constitutionality of the act and urging it be repealed "on the theory that it is in all respects a harmful and useless piece of legislation."

After making a canvass of the business world to determine the act's effect on legitimate business, the committee reported it noted "a general belief that the act in its present form is so severe and uncertain in its consequences as to be prohibitory of normal financial transactions."

Collegians Protective Police Aides Planned

College educated policemen would be added to the Pittsburgh Police Department under the terms of a new ordinance creating a protective division, to be introduced this afternoon in City Council by President Robert Garland.

Drafted by the Pennsylvania Committee on Penal Affairs (Western branch), of the Public Charities Association, it has two aims, according to Curtis A. Williams, secretary of the committee. These are:

"More definite and constructive methods and facilities for prevention of crime.

"More adequate protection for women and children who, through no fault of their own, may be caught in the dragnet of the law."

Under this ordinance, one or more units may be established under control of captains, either men or women, who will be responsible to an inspector, who also may be of either sex.

At least one unit of the division would be a women's unit, commanded by a woman captain, with the majority of its workers women.

All captains, the inspector and members of the Protective Division must have had at least two years of college study, and at least five years of additional general education, technical training or employment by an approved social agency.

The ordinance does not call for immediate expansion of the police bureau and the budget, but enables and requires the police department to establish the new division as [illegible]ly as required.

world. If anyone says "He ought to spend the money in America," remind him that Rockefeller-Standard Oil money has been made all over the globe, not only here, in America. You will find Rockefeller oil cans used as household utensils in the farthest corners of China.

LAST SATURDAY Germany was supposed to pay this country $50,000,000 and paid $1,250,000 instead, on account of interest. However, that is better by $1,250,000 than some other richer nations have done, and nations that borrowed as a matter of friendship and "brotherhood in arms." Do not laugh. That is a very sacred brotherhood, even if it is slow paying.

Swedish King Packs Bags To Stem Romance Tide

CANNES, France, April 2.—(AP.)—Word that another prince is "that way" about a commoner was responsible, friends said today, for a hurried packing of bags by King Gustaf V, racquet-swinging ruler of Sweden.

He planned a hasty return to his capital—there to put the royal foot down upon the reported marriage plans of his grandson, Prince Bertil, and Christina Brambeck, daughter of an army captain.

Apparently he is determined to deal more firmly with this case than he was with similar affairs in the not-to-distant past.

It was only a few weeks ago that 22-year-old Bertil's older brother, Prince Sigvard waived royal rights when he and Fraulein Erika Patzek were married at a London registry. The romance had blossomed on the movie lots in Berlin.

The royal family tried everything, even to rushing an envoy to London by plane, before giving up efforts to halt Prince Sigvard's marriage to the actress.

In 1932, Prince Lennart—cousin of Sigvard and Bertil — married Karin Nissvandt, daughter of a Stockholm businessman.

Now, say those who ought to know, the King has decided the royal family has had enough of such romances.

STORE HELD UP BY TEAR GAS BANDITS

Two robbers armed with revolvers and a tear gas pistol were sought by police today following Pittsburgh's first tear gas holdup in a confectionary store at 4237 Murray avenue.

The victim was Robert MacBeth, owner of the store, who was temporarily blinded by the tear gas the robbers fired at him as they fled with $115 looted from his cash register.

MacBeth was alone when the two men entered and presented a $5 bill for some cigarets. As he turned to get the cigarets, one of the bandits drew a pistol and stuck it in MacBeth's ribs while the other looted the cash register.

Then, as they started to flee, one bandits fired at MacBeth with the tear gas weapon. The merchant was temporarily blinded by the gas and was unable to move until several minutes after the robbers had escaped.

HUNT SLAYERS OF EX-CONVICT

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., April 2.—Police today were attempting to pierce the maze of mysterious details surrounding the murder of Mike Kelly, 37, ex-convict and CWA worker, found shot to death early Easter morning.

Held for questioning in the case are Guy Polito, 37, coal miner, and Bruno Musatanya, 37.

A new angle developed when Helen Holop, 18, with whom Kelly is said to have been infatuated, told authorities that Musatanya had informed her recently that Kelly "would be dead within a week." Musatanya denied the girl's statement.

Another person questioned in the Kelly slaying was Charles Frayer, recently arrested on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. Police recalled that Kelly and Frayer were both questioned in the unsolved double murder of J. Zellefrow and Mrs. Frank Jones in 1931.

Carmela Ponselle Operation Delayed

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—Carmela Ponselle, Metropolitan Opera singer, who was stricken March 23 with an acute gall bladder ailment, was reported improved today.

The hospital to which she was taken last night for an operation said she was resting comfortably. The operation has been postponed indefinitely.

Gambler, Broke, Ends Life Here With Gun, Gas

"Red" Stewart was dead today—a suicide.

The man who witnessed—and ran—some of the biggest crap games in the East End during past years shot himself through the head in his room, at 554 Farlson square, last night. He died in West Penn Hospital five hours later.

At the morgue his name was given as J. E. McClean. But to thousands who knew the feel of dice, the roll of a roulette wheel and the all-seeing eye of a "blackjack" dealer he was known as "Red" Stewart. "Red" was a man who took a chance, whether the stakes were large or small.

GAMBLING ACTIVITIES

Many remember him for his activities at a de luxe Penn avenue gambling establishment in East Liberty, where he acted in an official capacity.

Why "Red" took his own life is a matter for the Coroner to decide. He was supposed to be broke, delinquent in his debts and, in general, up against it. But police would add no confirmation to such reports. All they knew was they received a call from West Penn Hospital saying a man who had shot himself in a rooming house was in the hospital in a serious condition.

FOUND BY FRIEND

Police went to his room, learned that a man friend had found him on the floor beside a revolver and that he left three notes. One was to a sister, "Mamie," another to an aunt, "Martha," and the third to Mrs. Ocy Jacobs, his housekeeper, according to police. None was opened by police.

Inside the room gas was flowing from an open valve and doors and windows had been sealed. The gas was unnecessary, however, because the bullet he put through his head was sufficient to end his life. The morgue reported his death as coming from a wound in the side of his head.

JERITZA DONS EASTER TOGS

Togged out in smart Easter finery, the golden-haired Jeritza was in Pittsburgh today, looking as youthful and attractive as she did 10 years ago.

She came here as the star of Rudolf Friml's new operetta, "Annina." And her role in this light opera is just as exacting, she said, as the heavier parts she has played at New York's Metropolitan.

The star, who is also the Baroness Von Popper, said:

"I am working just as hard, but I get such a beeg—what you call it—keek out of this operetta. It is about a young man—but that would spoil the show for you."

ANN CANNON'S FATHER FACES BALM SUIT

Husband of Ex-Wife Of Smith Reynolds Seeks $250,000

CONCORD, N. C., April 2.—(AP.)—The Tribune says today that F. Brandon Smith, of Charlotte has served notice on Joseph F. Cannon, his father-in-law and wealthy textile manufacturer, of intention to sue for $250,000 damages charging alienation of his wife's affections.

Mrs. Smith, the former Anne Cannon Reynolds, first wife of Smith Reynolds, late heir to the R. J. Reynolds tobacco fortune, has been in Hot Springs, Ark., for several weeks establishing residence preparatory to seeking a divorce. Her father is with her.

The paper says Cannon was notified the suit would be filed unless he agreed to a settlement out of court. This the manufacturer said he would refuse. He was quoted as denying all allegations of Smith and as being prepared to fight the case in the courts if it is brought.

Cannon added that his daughter's decision to seek a divorce—her second in three years—was reached of her own free will. Her action is scheduled to be filed Thursday.

Smith and Anne were married shortly after her Reno divorce from Smith Reynolds and about the same time Reynolds married Libby Holman, Broadway blues singer who was later indicted and exonerated in connection with his death from a pistol wound which finally was decreed self-inflicted.

NEW DILLINGER CLUE SCOUTED

MINNEAPOLIS, April 2.—(AP.)—The Minneapolis Journal said today a suspect in the recent spectacular bank robberies at Sioux Falls, S. D., and Mason City, Ia.—and not John Dillinger—was the machine gunner who shot his way out of a St. Paul apartment Saturday.

Justice agents indicated they believed the machine gunner was Dillinger and the man with him was John Hamilton, Dillinger's "first lieutenant."

It was reported today, however, the Journal said, that another agency of the government had laid elaborate plans to raid the apartment Saturday night in search of a man who was wanted, among other things, for the Sioux Falls and Mason City robberies, and that the visit made by two Department of Justice agents and a lone St. Paul policeman was made without the knowledge of the other government agency.

It was said, the Journal added, that the other agency had prepared for several days to raid the apartment and had knowledge of the identity of the occupants and knew they were armed with machine guns.

Pope Ends Holy Year In Colorful Ceremony

Greatest Crowd in History of Vatican Attend Rites

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL,
International News Service.

VATICAN CITY, April 2.—In a colorful, elaborate ceremony formally marking the end of the holy year, Pope Pius XI today closed the holy door in the basilica of St. Peter's, through which 1,500,000 pilgrims passed during the past 12 months.

The door, the opening of which on April 1, 1933, marked the beginning of the holy year, was sealed shut, the Pontiff himself laying the first three bricks with a golden trowel.

One of the greatest crowds in the history of St. Peter's crowded the historic cathedral for the ceremonies.

There were fully as many present as yesterday, when 80,000 massed in St. Peter's and outside it for Easter ceremonies featuring the canonization of Don Giovanni Bosco, Turin priest, who founded the Salesian order.

Preceding the arrival of the Pope for today's rites there was a brilliant procession, opened by the Swiss Guards in their red, yellow and blue uniforms, designed several centuries ago by Michaelangelo. Then followed the secret chamberlains of cloak and sword, dressed in black velvet, with lace ruffs and knee breeches.

Next came members of the papal court, privy chamberlains, the confessor to the papal household, and the bishops assistant to the papal throne. Then followed cardinals wearing cappae magnae trimmed with ermine and gold embroidered vestments.

Following the procession through the holy door, came the Pope himself, sitting on the sedia gestatoria, carried by 12 servants in liveries of crimson. The Pope held a candle lighting his way.

At the altar the Pope performed several preliminary rites in which the choir joined in part. Then the Pope passed through the holy door again, being the last to use it, as he was the first upon its opening a year ago.

After blessing the bricks and mortar to be used in walling the door, the Pope donned a special apron, and laid the three bricks, which were handed to him by an assisting cardinal. Then he returned to the throne and washed his hands.

SCHOOL STRIKE COMES TO END

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., April 2.—More than 400 striking students of Bentleyville High School, having seen the contract of Ray D. Roche as an instructor for the next year, were ready to return to classes tomorrow.

R. J. Hartzel, supervising principal, met the strikers in front of the school, exhibited the contract, then presented it to Roche.

Half of the student body reported this afternoon but because of the miners' holiday, school was dismissed until tomorrow. Failure of the school board to hire Roche, popular among students and townspeople, for next year caused the walkout last Thursday.

MURDER OF SIX LAID TO DOPE ADDICTS

Universal Service.

BREMERTON, Wash., April 2.—Authorities investigating the wholesale murder of two women and four men in a beach colony home of Frank Flieder at Erland's Point, seven miles northwest of here, now advance the theory that the killings were committed by dope addicts.

They said they arrived at this belief after questioning acquaintances of the victims and because of the manner in which the slayers operated.

The fact that the house in which the six bodies were found was thoroughly ransacked, with furniture and dishes strewn everywhere, and because several of the victims were apparently bound and gagged after they were killed, supported the theory, officers said.

SUSPECTS HELD

Two men who were questioned in connection with a blood-stained suit cleaned by a Bremerton tailor on Friday were released.

Two other men, their identifies carefully shielded, were being questioned last night. Officers would not divulge the result of their questioning.

Among the victims, it was revealed today, as new details of the ghastly crime came to light, was the one-time nationally famous vaudeville team of Bert and Peggy Vincent, now local entertainers.

Robbery was the motive for the crime at the beach home of Flieder, who operated a grocery store at Erland's Point. When authorities entered they found the house a shambles.

Victims of the slaughter, which included Flieder and his wife, had lain in the house for more than 40 hours before the crime was discovered. The mouths of the victims had been taped, their limbs broken.

IDENTIFICATION HARD

Identification of the bodies was made difficult by their condition. The list of the wholesale killing as finally completed follows:

Mrs. Flieder, 50, second wife of Frank Flieder, formerly Mrs. Anna Taylor.

Bert Vincent, 50, entertainer of this city.

Mrs. Bert (Peggy) Vincent, 50, his wife, also an entertainer.

Eugene Chenevert, 50, of Walla Walla.

BIRTH CONTROL FEUD SETTLED

The exposure of East End druggists allegedly displaying and selling articles for birth control, threatened yesterday by the Rev. Thomas F. Coakley during services at Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church, failed to materialize.

The expose was cancelled after Father Coakley had been notified by druggists that they would cease the sale of articles to which he had objected. Earlier in the week, he had notified the druggists of his proposed action, declaring he had received many complaints from members of his congregation and parents of children.

Notables Attend Funeral for Kahn

COLD SPRING HARBOR, N. Y., April 2.—(INS.)—Leaders in the realm of finance and the musical and artistic worlds were to attend the funeral today of Otto H. Kahn, president of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and patron of the arts.

Jean Nash Hears Attorney's Plea To Acquit Son

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—The legal defender of Andrew Donaldson Kirwin, accused of murder on the high seas, today characterized his client as "drunk and befuddled" in a plea to a federal jury to acquit him.

Frederic Coudert, Jr., used the characterization in his summation to belittle the government's charge that Kirwin had on his mind intent to do bodily harm following a religious argument aboard the S. S. President Garfield last February 10.

The attorney reminded the jury of the testimony of the ship's master to the effect that Gilliam Sessoms, the victim of the alleged murder, was "stupidly drunk," and that Kirwin was "even drunker, an imbecile almost."

Coudert put forward as "a reasonable explanation" of the affair aboard the Garfield, the thesis that Sessoms picked up Kirwin's knife, carried it to his own cabin and there, drunk and subject to the lurch and roll of the ship, fell against the open blade, and accidentally wounded himself.

Kirwin's mother, the celebrated Jean Nash Dubonnett, listened with folded hands and knit brows. His aged grandmother, attempting to listen with an ear trumpet, appeared to be weeping.

Coudert concluded:

GRIP OF SLEEP HOLDS BEAUTY

CHICAGO, April 2.—(AP.)—To Miss Patricia Maguire of suburban Oak Park the fact that Easter and her twenty-ninth birthday came together yesterdy had no significance. Patricia continued in the grip of a form of sleeping sickness which since February 21, 1932, has kept her bedridden and in a stupor.

Members of the family gathered around her bedside and looked in vain, as they have for more than two years, for some definite sign of recovery. Early this year an increased animation on the part of the young woman led to hopes that she was becoming aroused, but nothing came of it.

MRS. HITCHCOCK SPORTSWOMAN DIES AT 67

AIKEN, S. C., April 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, the "mother of American polo," is dead.

Injuries suffered by the 67-year-old sportswoman December 26 in a riding accident resulted in her death at the Hitchcock home here yesterday.

Mr. Hitchcock and their two sons, Tommy and Frank, who attained fame on the polo field under her tutelage, were with her, as were their daughters, Mrs. J. Averill Clark and Mrs. Julian Peabody, both of New York.

Funeral arrangements included services in St. Mary's Catholic Church this morning and private burial later in the garden of the Hitchcock estate.

WEDDING IN 1891

As the dashing Louise Eustis, she was widely known as a horsewoman when she married Thomas Hitchcock, Westbury, L. I., sportsman, in 1891.

When her sons grew large enough to sit astride a horse, she gave them mounts and taught them the hard-riding and fearlessness that later characterized their play on the polo field.

Other youngsters who came under her tutelage here and at Westbury, where the Hitchcock's also maintain a home, included Devereux Milburn, Louis Stoddard, Jr., J. Watson Webb, F. Skiddy von Stade, James P. Mills, James C. Rathbone, Stewart Iglehart, E. T. Gerry, Jr., Michael G. Phipps and others who made American polo history.

She took these youngsters when they were very young and taught them horsemanship. Fearless herself, she taught them fearlessness and when they were injured she had them back on horses as soon as they were able again to sit in the saddle.

Often she rode with them in practice and often they had a difficult time keeping in her stride. The fall she suffered in Aiken in December was the fifth bad one for her in three years. Her love for horses, however, was so great she remained undaunted.

SEVEN GRANDCHILDREN

Besides her husband and four children, she leaves a brother, William E. Corcoran, of Washington, and seven grandchildren, Julian Peabody, Jr., Miss Daphine Peabody, J. Averill Clark, Jr., Thomas Clark, Louise Hitchcock, Margaret Mellon Hitchcock and Frank Hitchcock, Jr.

The wife of Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., is the daughter of W. L. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, and the widow of Alexander Laughlin.

Grand Opera 'War' Starts On Old Broadway

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—The Metropolitan Opera has closed its shortest season.

But there'll be plenty of grand opera on Broadway.

For two other companies opened a "war" over the Easter holidays with prices at 25 to 99 cents.

Long-haired Alfredo Salmaggi, originator hereabouts of the two-bit grand opera idea, opened again at the Broadway Theater with that perennial inaugural "Aida."

The Italian maestro had his usual elephants and camels for the triumphant march in the Verdi opera. Salmaggi wouldn't think of giving "Aida" without elephants and camels. And this year, he says, they're bigger and better than last.

Across Times square, at the Hippodrome, the newly organized Hippodrome National Opera Company also opened, but not with "Aida." It was "Carmen" instead.

In a few days Amato will give "Aida" too—but without elephants and camels.

There's some hard feeling between the two companies, and the "war" promises to be interesting.

Copper Bathing Suit At Inventors' Show

SEATTLE, April 2.—(AP.)—Copper bathing suits, "no-run" garters and thousands of other gadgets claimed the attention of inventors at their national congress today.

The "glider garter" of Mrs. Anne Hebner, of Hollywood, Cal., which eases the pull on silk hose when a "run" is imminent, was demonstrated, along with a bathing suit woven of copper cloth, for the beach beauty who doesn't want her suit to shrink. The suit came from Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. E. E. Baldwin, of Colorado, and Freda L. Hannum, of Seattle, were two other women inventors; the former presenting rubber combs for waving the hair, the latter a bracelet coin container which eliminates that embarrassing moment when milady gets on a street car and fumbles in her bag for a dime.

Five Seattle contributors brought devices for dispensing sugar in lump or granulated form, and dozens of men invented thingumbobs to chop vegetables, cut bread and toast it, ease the washing of egg beaters and solve other kitchen problems.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Marchland, of Gates Mills, O., have concocted a contrivance that shells lima beans. You put the bean in a device, which looks like a pair of pliers, and squeeze, and the bean hasn't a chance.

The children found a patron in Emil Felden, of Everett, Wash., who has constructed a toy chariot in which any young fellow of three summers can be his own Ben Hur.

Elmer Carlstrom, of Swedborg, Mo., and A. L. Elliott, of Denver, took cognizance of the kidnaping problem, with a sleeve tear gas gun to repel gangsters, and steel mitts to confine kidnapers when caught.

U. S. PROBE HITS BYLLESBY AND INSULL FIRMS

and Electric interests sought to "kill" utility reform bills through State Senator Warren T. Thayer, and were accused of bribing a public official in Tennessee.

Meanwhile aroused by the revelations concerning the Associated Company and Senator Thayer, Senate liberals pressed their fight for more effective utilities regulation.

The liberals joined forces with House progressives in an effort to secure final passage of the bill by Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California, to prohibit Federal District Courts from setting aside rate and valuation orders of state utilities commissions.

OKLAHOMA DEAL

Letters revealing the Oklahoma deal were fished out of files in the cellar of an Insull office in Oklahoma City, since the Insull crash, by Examiner A. M. McDermott, who brought the Thayer correspondence to light.

They treated the hiring of Russell as "a mighty good service" to the power interests, because the rate reduction movement in Oklahoma promised to spread over the state. The system Insull formerly controlled and the $1,200,000,000 Byllesby interests divide territory in Oklahoma.

GOOD SERVICE

Earl R. Ernsberger, president and general manager of the Insull property, Southwestern Light and Power Company, wrote on January 17, 1927, to W. C. Sharp, of Chicago, an operating vice president of Insull's Middle West Utilities Company, that Russell had been hired. The letter said a "mighty, good service" had been performed in getting Russell away from the consumers.

The letter said:

"You will recall that I wrote you and also talked with you about the possibility that I should be able to arrange for the employment of Campbell Russell by the utilities association, thereby stopping the prosecution of the suit for reduction of rates against the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company in Oklahoma City before the corporation commission.

"I had several conferences with Mr. Russell and he was so thoroughly sold on the Southwestern Light and Power Company, its policies and reputation, that he insisted that he would rather go to work for them. Therefore, I have hired him and he will go to work next week.

$5,000 SALARY

"His salary will be $5,000 per year—the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company have agreed to pay three-fourths of his salary. I have arranged also with the Oklahoma Utilities Association that Mr. Russell be transferred to that association in the next three or four months.

"I think it best to handle it as we are for the reason that direct connection with the association at this time might injure the utilities' standing with the Legislature that is now in session.

"You may know that we are all working very hard to prevent the repeal of House Bill 4.

"I think we have performed a mighty good service in getting Mr. Russell out of the work he has been doing, for that (the) reason that it would have spread from the O. G. and E. case in Oklahoma City to other parts of the state, at some time in the early future.

"Mr. Russell is a man of ability and he will be well worth the money that we pay him as our portion of his salary while we have him, and I think he will render a valuable service to the utilities association later."

INSULL PLEASED

Sharp replied:

"I showed your letter of January 17 to Mr. Insull and he was very much pleased with the arrangement that has been made, but suggested that perhaps we were asking the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company to bear too much of the burden.

"I told him I would take this matter up with you and see how you felt about it. He did not feel that our other companies in Oklahoma should share in this expense for obvious reasons.

"Your reply will be appreciated."

Utility Control Victory Predicted in New York

ALBANY, April 2.—(INS.)—Speedy passage of the bills urged by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to give the state more drastic control over utilities was predicted today by Speaker Joseph A. McGinnies, Republican boss of the Assembly. He said:

"I would like to see some of the bills amended but I expect they will be passed without much opposition."

Chief among the Governor's bills which the Republicans would like to have amended are those which permit municipalities to own and operate their own utilities; clothing the Public Service Commission with power to restrict the earnings of utilities to 5 per cent, and authorizing the commission to assess part of the cost of rate investigations against the utilities.

Arrest Depresses Wife of Insull

ATHENS, April 2.—(INS.)—Mrs. Samuel Insull, ill in bed since yesterday, was deeply depressed today when informed the Turkish government had arrested her husband. She refused any comment and gave orders she was not to be disturbed.

It was understood the Greek government was not likely to make any representations to Turkey regarding the arrest of Insull other than to point out the Greek government would act similarly should similar circumstances arise involving a Turkish vessel in Greek waters.

INSULL HELD IN OLD TURKISH PRISON

take him back to that country. A United States marshal, qualified to take him into custody, may be appointed by cable from Washington and sworn in by a consular official here.

Or, since Insull has made it plain he has not quit fighting, his Turkish attorneys, Ahmet Essat Bey and Alexander Mango, two of the foremost lawyers of Istanbul, may succeed in getting him freed on bail.

In any case, it seemed certain Insull could not much longer escape the long arm of the American law. His arrest was ordered by the Turkish cabinet at the specific request of Robert P. Skinner, the United States ambassador. It was ordered over the strong protest of the Greek government which claimed detention of the Greek ship Maiotis, on which Insull came to Istanbul, and his removal from the ship was a violation of Greco-Turkish treaties.

It was indicated today the Turkish government regarded its action as irrevocable, which means that sooner or later Insull will be turned over to United States officers and forcibly returned to the United States.

JOYOUS AT 'FREEDOM'

Insull arrived at Istanbul Thursday. The plan of the Maiotis was to take aboard provisions and proceed within 24 hours to the Black Sea, presumably bound for a Rumanian port.

Even when Turkish officials announced the detention of the ship, Insull apparently was not worried and believed he would be allowed to proceed. Not until Turkish officers forcibly removed him from the ship yesterday, giving him only a few minutes in which to dress, and took him before a Turkish court, did the former Chicagoan manifest concern.

Then, because of the incompetency of an interpreter, Insull mistakenly believed the court had allowed him to go free and made a speech thanking the judges for giving him "justice." He was radiantly buoyant as he left the courtroom.

GUARDED IN HOTEL

Outside, however, officers promptly took him in custody and conveyed him by automobile to a dingy hotel. There, bewildered and angry, he spent the night under heavy guard. This morning he was allowed to move to the Grand Hotel de Londres, a more pretentious hostelry, but guards remained about the door of his room and hovered near while he lunched alone in the hotel restaurant.

For hours today Insull awaited word of his fate. He consulted with his attorneys, but refused to talk with anyone else.

Then, after a day of suspense, the former ruler of a vast utilities empire, who once dominated a financial and social world of his own, was taken ignominiously away to jail to await eventual return to the country from which he fled when his financial structure collapsed. The end of his long fight to keep clear of Uncle Sam's clutches was in sight.

FEAR SUICIDE TRY

The order for Insull's arrest was another blow to the aged financier who has fought to escape the clutches of American law. It provided another highlight in the dramatic situation that has arisen since Insull sailed into the harbor of Istanbul aboard the dingy freighter.

Insull, after spending the night heavily guarded in a poorly furnished room of a third rate hotel, awoke today unaware that Turkey had decided to turn him over to American authorities.

It was believed police feared a possible heart attack or a suicide attempt during the night might result if Insull was informed of the decision.

He was put to bed pleading vainly for information. He broke down and wept openly, declaring repeatedly that he was "all alone."

Ambassador Robert P. Skinner called upon Foreign Minister Tewfik Rushdi Bey and thanked the Turkish government for its co-operation in the Insull matter.

BARGAINS FOR ROOM

It was possible international repercussions might result from this co-operation as a result of Insull's being forcibly arrested. Insull's attorneys were striving to induce Greece to push the matter to a finish.

Insull's seizure by Turkish police surprised him. Detectives boarded his ship and, discarding their previous manner of standing on ceremony, went directly to Insull's cabin and told him he was going ashore.

Insull became very angry, and refused to go. He was dressed in pajamas. The police took him by the arm and told him again that he was going ashore. Insull decided he had better get dressed, and was allowed to do so. He put on a dark blue suit and left the Maiotis, the flight ship on which he had left Athens exactly two weeks before.

Indications that the ex-utility king's situation might even be complicated by a shortage of funds were seen in the fact he bargained for a rate on his room when he moved to the Grand Hotel de Londres.

Washington Acts for Quick Return of Insull

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(INS.)—Gratified by word that Turkey had ordered the arrest of Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicagoan, the State Department today sought the advice of the Department of Justice as to the quickest way to effect the former utility magnate's return to this country.

If legally possible, the State Department wished to authorize a member of the American legation, or some other American citizen in Turkey, to take Insull into custody and escort him back to the United States.

An opinion was sought from the Department of Justice as to whether it would be possible to swear one in as United States marshal in Turkey, or whether it would be necessary to send a special agent to Istanbul.

If it is possible to authorize some one there to take him into custody, it is expected President Roosevelt would have to sign a presidential warrant for this purpose.

The question of how the presidential warrant could be placed in the hands of Turkish authorities also was under consideration. In order to take a fugitive abroad into custody, it usually is necessary to transmit to the foreign government a warrant signed by the President.

State Department officials were hopeful it might be possible to avoid the delay of sending the warrant to Istanbul by giving it to the Turkish ambassador here.

SLOAN HERALDS 'IRRESISTIBLE' RECOVERY

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—Industrial recovery, in the opinion of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, is now under way with "irresistible force."

In his pamphlet report for 1933, written about the middle of March and made public today, Sloan dated the business upswing as beginning in the summer of 1932. He said:

"There appeared then indications of improvement throughout the world, which improvement has been well augmented during the intervening time."

He added that recovery might be accelerated or retarded by governmental influences, but that the general trend would transcend such factors. He wrote:

"Unless upset by some unusual circumstances, improvement will continue. The rate of improvement may be accelerated or retarded by injecting into the picture abnormal influences, but the general trend will not be affected for the reason that an industrial recovery, like an industrial depression is, in a practical sense of the word, an irresistible force."

Surveying the NRA, Sloan declared it was "only natural that errors of policy and fact are bound to develop, and can only be corrected through the process of evolution."

He said there were three "vitally important" considerations in the NRA setup.

First, he declared, its labor provisions must be clarified "or there is the certainty of industrial strife the equal of which this country has not yet seen."

He added that there appeared "to be looming the spectre of the greatest monopoly that ever existed in any country in the world—the closed shop." Sloan pleaded for preservation of the open shop principle.

If price-fixing, or any similar trend toward elimination of competition, be permitted, Sloan said, industries affected must be governed so a premium is not placed upon inefficiency.

Third, Sloan warned that a drastic shortening of the work-week would not solve the unemployment problem. He said:

"An immediate radical adjustment is bound to exert a highly deflationary influence."

PERKINS AIDE 'OUT' IN ROW

BOSTON, April 2.—(AP.)—There appeared to be a difference of opinion today on the "resignation" of Charles G. Wood, conciliator for the Federal Conciliation Service, who has acted as mediator in industrial disputes in the East, South and Middle West.

Wood announced his resignation yesterday in a sharply worded letter to Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; the Labor Department said:

"Wood was dismissed more than a month ago."

In his letter to Miss Perkins, Wood charged her with having "fallen down on the job" through failure to take the lead in reconciling industrial belligerents.

He described a statement of the Labor Department at Washington that he had been notified more than a month ago that his services would not be required after he completed the work on which he was engaged as "very inaccurate" and said he had received no notification of dismissal.

The conciliator, a Democrat, praised President Roosevelt.

HELD AS OWNER IN GAME RAID

James Sundo was held for court under $1,000 bail on a charge of maintaining a gambling house at a hearing before Alderman Thomas M. Geary today. Detectives arrested him in a raid at 615 Main street, Sharpsburg, early yesterday.

Detectives said that 60 patrons who were crowded three deep around a dice table made a dash for freedom when the officers battered their way in with sledges. Even a promise that only the proprietor was to be arrested failed to stop the stampede, the sleuths reported.

Three other places in the vicinity visited by the detectives were reported to have been found deserted.

Goodrich Adopts Vast Pension Plan

AKRON, O., April 2.—(INS.)—The B. F. GoGodrich Company today announced a retirement pension plan for its 21,000 employes throughout the United States and Canada. The announcement was made by James D. Tew, president.

The plan calls for the accumulation of more than $1,500,000 every year through small weekly payments from the employes and the balance from the company funds. Retiring employes will have income for life depending on their length of service.

Delay in Settling Hotel Row Scored

The delay in settling the William Penn Hotel strike was scored yesterday in a statement issued by the Committee on Social Action, a division of the Council for Peace and Social Action. The statement issued through its chairman, Rabbi B. Benedict Glazer, said:

"It's one more example of the resources for delay which economic power affords the employer."

Camden Soup Plant Employes on Strike

CAMDEN, N. J., April 2.—(AP.)—Several hundred workers of the Campbell Soup Company began a strike yesterday. Union pickets were at eight entrances of the plant and leaders said no person attempted to go to work.

Meanwhile, John Green, acting president of the Industrial Union of Ship and Marine Workers, asserted the strike at the New York Shipbuilding Company would continue "until we win."

CWA MEN GO ON RELIEF PAYROLLS

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(AP.)—A million and a half men reached today for the hoes, hammers and shovels they dropped last week—but they are relief workers now instead of CWA employes.

State relief administrations assumed the job of seeing that work up to 25 hours a week goes to those who otherwise might be hungry.

Conceding the faults of the Civil Works Administration experiment, Harry L. Hopkins, administrator, nevertheless declared it a major success.

Hopkins is probably the only man in history who ever directed the hiring and then the firing of four million men in so short a time.

About 300,000 persons still are classed as CWA employes, but they, too, will be let go in the next four weeks.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the Civil Works Administration are both headed by Hopkins. In most states the Relief Administration and the Civil Works Administration have been identical.

The relief administrators, however, will be better able, they say, to determine, under the new setup, just who is in actual need of the work to provide food and clothing for their families.

Many of the civil works employes have gone back into private industry within the last few weeks, particularly in rural areas where small farmers have gone back to their land. Industrial employment has picked up also.

Relief Work Program Faces More Delay

Further delay in the transfer of Civil Works employes to the ranks of the new Relief Work Division loomed today as it became known that no persons on the CWA list have as yet been notified to return to their jobs.

Though the Emergency Relief Board was given the names of all CWA employes several weeks ago to pass on their eligibility for employment under the RWD, only 1,300 of the 23,000 had been cleared today.

Since all these must again be investigated by the personnel department of the RWD before the work assignments may be sent out by the State-Federal Employment Agency, it appeared that many projects would still be idle by the end of the week.

Though Eric H. Biddle, state RWD chief, said he expects the program to be functioning smoothly throughout Pennsylvania by Saturday, he indicated that Allegheny and Philadelphia counties would be the last to resume.

The new program is assured of finances for the entire month, following the allocation of $10,000,000 by the federal government to the state for direct and work relief.

More Babies Born In Homes Hit by Income Cuts

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—A survey indicating that wage earners whose income was reduced between 1929 and 1932 had 39 per cent more babies than those whose income was not cut, was made public today by the Milbank Memorial Fund.

The same survey showed there was 50 per cent more illness in families whose income dropped.

The study was made in a survey of 8,000 families in New York, Syracuse, Baltimore, Birmingham, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Cleveland.

Faulty Flues Cause Two Oakland Fires

Two fires within 12 hours in a three-story frame building at Bouquet and Sennott streets, were blamed by firemen on defective flues. Damage was estimated at $500. The first floor is occupied by a cafe, and the building is also the residence of Frank Dresso and his family.

CLASH MARKS NRA HEARING FOR WIRES

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(AP.)—The president of Western Union today challenged NRA's right to produce a code for the telegraph communications industry, while a representative of Postal advocated this action in the "interests of the public."

R. B. White, Western Union president, contended at an NRA hearing for formulation of a code that his company would not benefit from the proposal. He added, however, that "we are here to cooperate under the law."

Howard L. Kern, representing the Postal Telegraph Company, attacked trade practices in the industry, saying they were "adversely and injuriously affecting the interests of the public, of the companies themselves and of their employers."

Kern said a code should be put into effect reducing the hours of work from 48 to 40. This, he added, would bring increased employment to 4,000 or 5,000.

White told NRA officials that Postal and Western Union for code purposes are substantially all there is to the telegraph industry and that the cable companies and RCA Communications, Inc., are not substantially affected because of their small number of employes.

Last July, he said, the company restored some of the depression cut. Employes again are demanding further increases, he said, and negotiations will begin April 9. He said he hoped it would be possible to grant the increases.

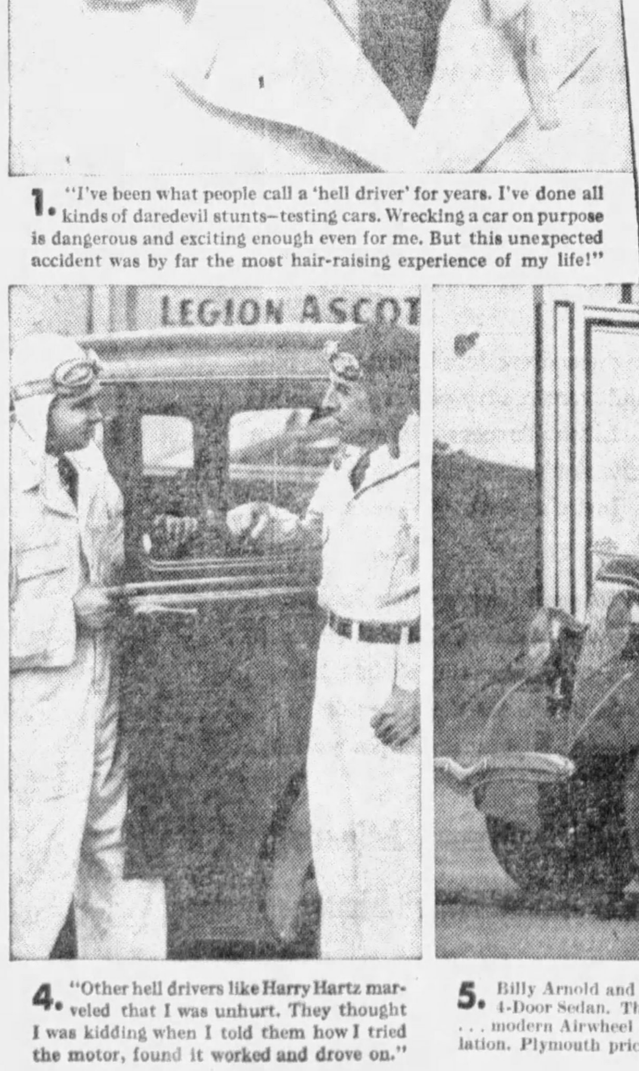
"My Car Rolled over 5 times —with ME inside!"

A CERTIFIED INTERVIEW WITH "HELL DRIVER" BILLY ARNOLD



1. "I've been what people call a 'hell driver' for years. I've done all kinds of daredevil stunts—testing cars. Wrecking a car on purpose is dangerous and exciting enough even for me. But this unexpected accident was by far the most hair-raising experience of my life!"

"It took more than Luck to save my Life . . . it took a Safety-Steel Body"

IT HAPPENED on the Bakersfield highway. Billy Arnold was making fast time for Los Angeles. Road clear . . . rising curve ahead. Suddenly . . . but let him tell it in his very own words:

"Suddenly another car swept 'round the curve . . . coming right at me . . . on the wrong side. I had my choice. A head-on crash . . . or the gully on the right. I took the gully."

Arnold's Plymouth shot from the highway . . . crashed over on its side . . . and started rolling. Eye-witnesses said he turned over five times. They pulled him from behind the wheel . . . bruised, but with no bones broken! Sure . . . the fenders were crushed. Two tires had blown. But, with these fixed, Arnold started the engine and drove the remaining 100 miles to Los Angeles that night!

"I wouldn't give a plugged nickel," says Arnold, "for my chances in any other low-priced car but a Plymouth with its Safety-Steel Body. It undoubtedly saved my life."

2. "There's where it happened. The diagram shows how my Plymouth smacked the side, bounced in the air and rolled over five times!"

3. "I couldn't avoid it. I had only a split second to see what would happen if I tried to hold my car to the road. The other car was right in my path. I knew I had to swerve to save him. Down I plunged . . . turning over and over!"

4. "Other hell drivers like Harry Hartz marveled that I was unhurt. They thought I was kidding when I told them how I tried the motor, found it worked and drove on."

5. Billy Arnold and his son with the new De Luxe Plymouth 4-Door Sedan. This De Luxe model has 114-inch wheelbase . . . modern Airwheel tires . . . and perfected all-weather ventilation. Plymouth prices begin at $530 f.o.b. factory, Detroit. The new Plymouth Six is the largest low priced Six-Cylinder 4-door Sedan in America! Prices subject to change without notice. Duplate Safety Plate Glass throughout for low extra charge (only $10 on De Luxe Sedan).

YOU MAY BE a most careful driver. But you want all the protection you can get these days against the "other fellow's" recklessness.

That's what Plymouth gives you . . . not only in its body, but in its brakes. Plymouth's brakes are Hydraulic Brakes . . . the safest, surest brakes on any car!

And there's something else you want. That's comfort! So consider, too, the extra comfort features of a Plymouth.

Patented Floating Power engine mountings are one. They keep engine vibration in the motor, away from you inside the car. Individual Wheel Springing is another. It makes each front wheel "step" right over ruts and bumps, ends all bouncing and jars.

When you're thinking about your next car, remember Plymouth's four vital features: Hydraulic Brakes. Safety-Steel Body. Floating Power. Individual Wheel Springing.

Any Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler dealer will arrange a demonstration for you any time.

COUNTY RELIEF WORKERS ASK PAY RAISE

A request for immediate consideration of increased salaries has been made by the newly organized Associated Relief Workers of Allegheny County in a letter to the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board. The organization is composed of about 400 members.

Copies of the letter were sent to John W. Lawrence, chairman of the relief board; George P. Mills, Allegheny County relief administrator; Miss Nell Scott, director of relief, and Douglas P. Falconer, of Brooklyn, who has been making a survey of Allegheny County's relief situation for the State Emergency Relief Board.

Minimum monthly starting salary for field workers and visitors, $90; minimum for field workers with three months service, $100; minimum for field workers with six months service, $110; minimum for field workers with one year service, $125, and minimum for workers with two years service, $150.

The letter characterized as an "abomination" the present fixed salary standard of $57 for all field workers, irrespective of service, and recites:

"If our job were merely a temporary one, low salaries could be endured. Now that it is certain that unemployment is a permanent problem, it is expedient that salaries be raised.

"The National Industrial Conference Board reports that the cost of living in the United States has risen 7.7 from March, 1933, to December, 1933. Certainly it is apparent to the most casual observer that to any person already receiving a sub-standard salary this upward trend in the prices of essentials is bound to prove ruinous."

The letter also cited salaries paid in other cities, in which it was shown that Allegheny County is below most of the country in relief workers' salaries.

JOB GAIN SHOWN IN CWA SURVEY

Results of a survey of employment, occupational changes and relief activities have been issued in a pamphlet compiled here with the assistance of workers provided by the Civil Works Administration.

Preparation of the pamphlet was supervised by John D. Beatty and Herbert L. Grau, of the bureau of recommendations, Carnegie Institute of Technology, and Maj. Philip Mathews, of the bureau of governmental research.

Among the statistics disclosed were those showing that the high point of unemployment in Allegheny County was reached in August, 1932, when 226,675 were out of work.

This compares with an unemployment total of 168,9688 in the county in December, 1933.

Interesting data in the pamphlet included figures showing that 45.6 per cent of clerical occupations in Pittsburgh are filled by women.

DOG FIGHT ENDS IN FISTICUFFS

A dog fight in Washington street resulted in a painful injury to one man, a fist fight between two others, a murder call to the Detective bureau, and entertainment to about 200 witnesses.

When detectives bored their way through a crowd in Washington street they found Bernard Collette, 55, of Washington street, lying on the street with his face lacerated. They picked him up, demanded an explanation, and were told that two dogs were fighting.

As the dogs became embroiled an unidentified man sought to separate them. Another interfered, demanding that the dogs be permitted to settle their differences. The men became embroiled.

As the men fought, it developed, they knocked Collette down, stunning him. A crowd gathered, and someone reported the affair as a murder.

'LAZY' VOTES PERIL ECONOMY

Misguided on Taxes, They Encourage Big Payrolls

One great difficulty in the way of governmental economy is the multitude of voters who think that they do not pay taxes and therefore are indifferent or even favorable to government expenditures, Prof. Thomas Nixon Carver, of Harvard University, states in an article appearing in the April issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Dr. Carver, who is professor emeritus of political economy at Harvard, points out the danger of increasing numbers on the payrolls. He declares that the increasing payrolls of our various overlapping governments may ally the indifferent voters on their side and dominate politics.

In his article, Prof. Carver writes:

"The numerous voters on the payrolls of our various governments are multiplied unnecessarily by too many taxing bodies overlapping and duplicating one another. The interests of these voters are opposed to governmental retrenchment or economy.

"These interested voters may soon, if they do not already, hold the balance of power in our governments. Already one great difficulty in the way of government economy is the multitude of voters who think that they pay no taxes and who are therefore indifferent or even favorable to government expenditures. The increasing numbers on the payrolls of our various overlapping governments may ally the indifferent voters on their side and dominate our politics.

"In that case we shall plunge deeper and deeper into government extravagances. With the increasing tax burdens, there will be poor picking outside of the government service and increasing numbers will have to seek government employment. When industries have to pay such heavy taxes they cannot employ so many men; there will be more men for the government to take care of, and so on, from bad to worse."

EX-DETECTIVE CAPTAIN DIES

Michael Hanley, 65, former captain of detectives who retired on pension more than 20 years ago, died this morning in his home at 3420 Dawson street, Oakland. He was stricken with pneumonia last Friday.

Hanley retired from the police department after 22 years of service, and became manager of the safety deposit department of the Oakland Savings and Trust Company, which later was merged with the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company.

While captain of detectives, Hanley became widely known by issuing an order removing all chairs from the detective bureau. He explained:

"I don't want any detectives loafing around the bureau in chairs. If they don't get out and work, they'll have to loaf standing up."

Mr. Hanley was a member of St. Paul's Cathedral parish. Surviving are Mrs. Margaret McNally Hanley, his wife, and four children, Sherman, John, Mary and Rose.

Home Repaired With Numerous Federal Patches

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

The mortgage has been taken over by the loan relief, grandpop is with the CWA, the garden is under protection of the farm board and the roof is there by an act of Congress.

We plowed three of the goldfish under and are hoarding the others. Brother joined the reforestration corps and sleeps beneath the potted geranium.

Junior's kiddy-kar is trucking for the Federal Highway Commission and doing a nice job. Baby's bank was taken over by daddy's Reconstruction Finance Committee, the Senate just gave uncle his veteran's allotment, and grandpop only requires 11 more states to make his spring tonic legal.

Braddock Child Visits White House

HERBERT BLUMENFELD, 8

Infantile Paralysis Victim Plays With Sistie, Buzzie

Eight-year-old Herbie Blumenfeld, son of a Braddock merchant, is one in a million. Well—almost.

A sufferer from infantile paralysis since 1929, Herbie went to Washington with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Blumenfeld, to visit the White House last week, and what a visit it was!

Not only did they visit the White House, but they had tea with Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter, Mrs. Curtis B. Dall, and Herbie played with Sistie and Buzzie and had a "swell time."

Mrs. Blumenfeld told of the visit at her home, 312 Holland avenue, Braddock:

"There are not enough adjectives to describe Mrs. Roosevelt. She is very gracious."

Herbie, apparently, had had a very good time playing with the Dall children while the grown-ups sipped tea. His eyes glistened as he listened to his mother's account, and he nodded his head emphatically in agreement.

During the course of the visit, Mrs. Blumenfeld said, she discussed with the First Lady the advisability of treatment at Warm Springs Foundation for Herbie Mrs. Roosevelt listened with friendly interest while she told of her son's illness, Mrs. Blumenfeld said, and suggested that the child be taken to the Georgia resort.

Love at first sight, is there such a thing?

Do you pass along for years, and ramble in and out of light, thoughtless affections, suddenly to fall headlong into that mesmeric emotion called genuine heart affection?

Yola says there is. It has happened to her. This magic. And now she is in a cloud, walking.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am one of your daily readers in the Sun-Telegraph and enjoy your articles so much. I have decided to send in my own problem for your solving.

I met a fellow in October. And I fell in love with him at first sight. My parents do not want me to go with him, or even mention his name. But I am so in love with him! I simply can't be expected to forget.

If my parents were really aware of this, they would try every way to put a stop to it. So I must tell someone.

I want to get him a gift for his birthday. I would like to know if I am doing right or wrong, in doing this. I do need help so badly. YOLA.

NEEDS MORE INFORMATION

My dear young reader, you fail to give me any of the details of this love affair. You do not tell me why your parents object to the young man with whom you are in love. I feel very sorry for you, as I feel deeply sympathetic with any girl who has a heart problem, yet how can I give wise advice when there is so much in the case of which I am ignorant.

If he is a worthy young man, straightforward, with honest intentions, and perhaps poverty is the only drawback, then I agree with you, and think your parents wrong. But if he is not a good young man, and is given to philandering, then your father and mother have a side to their objections.

Sometimes there is a peculiar sex allure about one of the young men whom we know that attracts us. We are headlong in our fascination for him. We idealize him, and think of him as having qualities which even he would not recognize as his.

Then, dear little Yola, I would say that instead of having fallen in love at first sight with a man, you have fallen instead for a phase of romance. You have become obsessed with a person who is experienced in a way you are not.

The gay young fellow who has a past and who needs reforming, he, so long as the sun and moon shine over us, will be an object of desire to the home-loving and motherly heart of woman.

The Beau Brummel with the daring ways, who butts in where the more righteous young man would not dare to go, also takes his toll of trusting feminine hearts.

Does your October friend have any of these qualities, Yola?

If so, try doing without him. Try letting absence clear out the emotion in your heart for him.

Write to me at greater length, and give me more detail. Then I will do less surmising, and give more explicit advice. If you are quite sure your mother would object very strongly to giving him the birthday present, do not do so. You will not lose him on account of not doing so. A birthday card would be enough, anyway.

SECOND-HAND BEAU

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am in love with a fellow whom I met last year. He has been treating me very nice until about six months ago. He did not have a steady job then. But now I think he has. And he has been going with another girl lately, who broadcasts it everywhere. People say I go with a second-hand fellow.

What can I do to get all his time, please? IN LOVE.

I wonder if a young man who keeps going steadily with you only when he is down and out, and takes another girl out when the weather is fairer for him, is worth worrying over. I would say, no matter how much it may hurt you, that he cares more for the other girl, and unless you plan tactfully and wait patiently to win him back, you have nothing ahead of you but loss of him, anyway. Then, too, is a man whom you have to work so hard to win and who has a way of caring for others as well as you and spending his money on them instead of you, a safe bet for any girl? You don't tell me your age, yet I feel your are very young. There are too many nice, generous, loyal fellows, to waste your time on what may be another girl's property.

Miss Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

Fay King Pleads for Those Now Grown Old and Who Need Aid

I WISH I COULD AFFORD TO LET HIM KEEP HIS OLD ROOM HE'S HAD SO MANY YEARS, BUT I'LL PUT HIM IN THE LITTLE ONE UNTIL HE FINDS WORK AGAIN!
COUNTLESS GOOD HEARTED LANDLADIES HAVE CARRIED ROOMERS OVER THE DEPRESSION
IT HAS BEEN A HARD LOT FOR THOSE PAST MIDDLE AGE, WHO ARE COMPLETELY ALONE IN THE WORLD
I'M SORRY, BUT WE MUST CONSIDER FAMILY MEN FIRST HARD TO FIND EMPLOYEMENT, HARD TO GET HELP FROM ORGANIZATIONS
FAY KING

By FAY KING

A sad lot is that of persons along in years, alone in the world, and out of work.

Because they are old they find it hard to find employment. Because they are single, it is difficult to get help from organizations that give first consideration to those with dependents.

Yet those with no one to turn to except themselves are worthy of consideration, also.

Their lives had been quiet and good. They paid bills promptly. They saved for a rainy day, but that's gone now. Home was only a cosy room, and but for goodhearted landladies many such men and women would now be roofless. These persons alone, are by nature often timid, and reserved, and hide their sufferings from the eyes of the world.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Doctor Dilemma

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Husband and wife are both doctors. I wish to send them a card of congratulations on their anniversary. How should the envelope be addressed? I claim it should read:

Dr. and Mrs. John Smith.

My friends say it should read:

Dr. John Smith
Dr. Helen Smith. or
Doctors John Smith and Helen Smith.

I agree with you that from a social standpoint your form is the correct one: Doctor and Mrs. John Smith, or Doctor John Smith and Mrs. Smith. Usually a woman doctor prefers to keep her social name distinct from her professional name. However it would be well for you to find out, if you can conveniently, if this woman doctor prefers this social distinction of name or not.

Doctor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle an argument, will you please tell me, if there is a doctor in the family, are the members of the family supposed to call him doctor or just his first name? I think that he should be called John, but a friend thinks that he should be called Doctor John. I am a brother of the doctor. K.

Members of the family and close friends would call this doctor "John," just as they would if he hadn't a title. Friends who do not know him well enough to call him by his first name, would call him Doctor Wells . . . not Doctor, and not Doctor John. It is poor form, incidentally, for us to address a doctor as "Doctor" . . . we should use his last name with his title, just as we should use the last name with "Mr."

Contract Bridge

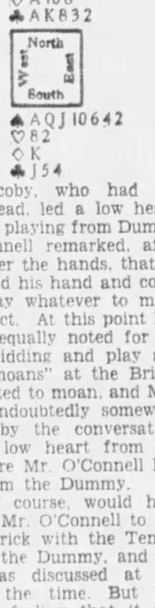
HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Interesting Hand

When a Bridge player has taken advantage of an opportunity to make an unusual Grand Slam contract by a squeeze and at the same time has chivalrously refused to inflict a penalty for an inadvertent play by an adversary, he has had two extremely interesting experiences in one hand.

The story of today's hand is that of a game at a bridge club in New York, the participants in which were J. Harlin O'Connell and Theodora A. Lightner, playing against Mrs. B. E. Pollack and Oswald Jacoby. Mr. O'Connell was South and Mr. Lightner North, and they finally reached a contract of seven spades, which, as he quite correctly states, should never have been bid.



Mr. Jacoby, who had the Opening lead, led a low heart, and before playing from Dummy Mr. O'Connell remarked, after looking over the hands, that he had overbid his hand and could see no play whatever to make the contract. At this point Mr. Lightner, equally noted for his brilliant bidding and play and for his "moans" at the Bridge table, started to moan, and Mrs. Pollack, undoubtedly somewhat confused by the conversation, played a low heart from her hand before Mr. O'Connell had played from the Dummy.

This, of course, would have permitted Mr. O'Connell to win the first trick with the Ten or Knave in the Dummy, and the matter was discussed at the table at the time. But Mr. O'Connell, feeling that it was not exactly the thing to do, refused the penalty. He played the Ace of hearts from Dummy and then saw that there was a possibility, albeit a very poor one, of making the hand. First there was the chance of finding the King and one spade in the East hand, but even then a club loser remained unless Mr. Jacoby held the King-Queen of hearts and the Queen of clubs. This holding seemed a possibility as Mr. Jacoby, during the bidding, had called hearts and a low heart had been played by East before the Dnmmy had played, so Mr. O'Connell played a low diamond from Dummy to the singleton King, then played a low club to the Ace in Dummy, and discarded his remaining heart on the diamond Ace. He next played a spade from Dummy and finessed, and then dropped the King of spades with the Ace. Mr. O'Connell continued with the spades and Mr. Jacoby was squeezed, so the contract of seven, which appeared so ambitious at the beginning, was realized.

The East and West hands were:

West	East
♠ 8 7 5	♠ K 3
♡ K Q 6 5	♡ 9 4 3
◇ 9 3	◇ Q J 7 6 5 4 2

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Irresistable is a coat glimpsed at a smart shop. It is of black baghera, with wide armhole bands of silver fox which continue into a collar in back. The fulness is gathered under the belt in back and in front the nipped-in waist is the line of closing. There are two buttons made of tiny mirror glass.

Seams are seen again. A suit of gray woolen has seams and edges piped in scarlet, matching the buttons and belt which are of leather. The blouse is of checked red and gray linen.

The key to the situation need not be lost. A new handbag of black crepe with a frame of gold filigree, set with pearls, takes care of that. There is a fine silver chain to which your key is attached, and the key fits into a tiny slit pocket below the ornament.

A new delight is the spring evening wrap made of velvet, and tightly fitted to the figure, with original touches of fur. Such a wrap is a model in apple green velvet with fur on either side of the skirt starting at the hipline. The fur pieces are small at the top and increase in size until the hem, where they are large. Silver fox is used.

A perfect blind is at hand in the form of a bag made of strips of wood, held together with cords, just like a Venetian blind. It has a wood frame and initials in silver and black enamel.

Be smart and wear prints in the evening. A lovely new model is of black creep with a printed design of anemones in green, yellow and orange with green leaves. The flowers, cut out, are arranged down the front of the dress from decolletage to hem. The shoulders are covered and there is a long trained skirt.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

If Baby's Speech Is Slow

No doubt you have listened to the worries of a mother who feared her child would never talk. It is not unusual for a child not to talk until he is almost two and a half years of age, and even later. Of course, as a rule, children learn to talk at an earlier age. Because of this, delayed speech creates a great deal of anxiety and downright worry.

Dr. Copeland

I receive many letters requesting information on this subject. Generally the young mother writes that her child is in good health, and has recently been examined by a physician, but in spite of a favorable report, anxiety is still uppermost in her mind.

Let me assure the young mother, that if careful examination reveals no deformity and the child is making slow but steady strides in development, there is no need for alarm. Even if the child does not speak before two and a half or three years of age, it need be no reason for unhappiness. Don't worry over it—the child will make up for the lost year or two!

Of course, there are cases where delayed speech can be traced to some physical disturbance. Sometimes it is the result of difficulty in hearing, or it may be due to lack of proper muscular team work. In rare instances, it can be traced to some disorder of the central nervous system caused by an injury at birth or from a fall. When recognized at an early age it is often possible to regenerate and restore the health of the injured nerves.

Bear in mind that one group of children may learn to walk and talk at an unusually early age. Another group does not walk and talk until quite late. The latter children are rarely backward in their mental development and, as a rule, show high intellectual development later in life. For some unknown reason, baby girls learn to walk and talk sooner than their baby brothers.

As I have said, there is no occasion for alarm, providing the child has been thoroughly examined by a physician and no physical defects have been found. Never scold a child for backwardness in talking or walking. Above all, do not ridicule the child or in his presence compare him with another of the same age. The child is an extremely sensitive creature and suffers greatly from the humiliation of unnecessary comparisons.

Encourage the child to talk. Be patient with him. Talk slowly and carefully so that he may eventually grasp the meaning of words and associate them with objects. A good plan is to read from illustrated child story books. Point to the pictures as you read the description.

May I advise you against the constant use in the house of a foreign language. Many children have difficulty in learning to speak English if they hear another language at home. Later, it will be to his advantage to master a second language. But "one at a time" should be the rule with the young child.

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge's Spirits Revived When Young People Return

My lips twitched as Marion saucily asked me if the older people of the wedding house party were "playing postoffice" in the darkened rooms. The mental picture she evoked of the dignified Braithwaites, the ultra modern Brixtons, the cosmopolitan Philip Veritzen and plump Fanny Arlen playing old-fashioned kissing games banished for a few seconds that other fearsome vision of possible harm to Junior and Roderick, which had been before my eyes ever since the small boys had gone away on a moonlight drive to the beach.

"You are an impertinent chit," I told her, laughing, "and you deserve to be sent to bed without any supper."

"Oh, Mrs. Graham, say not so!" Bob implored theatrically. "If she goes to bed supperless, gallantry, chivalry, or what have you, will compel Rod and me to do without eating, also; and noblesse oblige—pipe that, folks!—will keep Carol from eating, too. I warn you that you will have four near corpses on your hands if you carry out that threat."

"Get around to the kitchen, all of you," I ordered, "and see what you can find. But listen carefully first to a warning and a threat. You would better work quickly, for 12 grown-ups besides Junior and Roderick have gone to the ocean for a moonlight drive, and they will be coming back ravenous."

"Here's hoping they find something after we get through," Bob said, seizing Carolyn's arm and starting for the kitchen door. But Ronald dexterously caught him by the shoulder.

Heart Warms to Courtesy

"Stand still, you wild ass of the pampas," he said, "and hear what else Mrs. Graham has to say. You spoke of a threat." He turned to me with smiling deference and my heart warmed to the unfailing courtesy with which Ronald treats his elders.

"It's a short one," I told him. "Simply this. Clean up after your supper, if you don't want Katie camping on your trails tomorrow."

"We won't leave so much as a crumb," Marion promised, but again I halted them in their rush toward the rear door.

"You'll have to come in this door," I told them. "All the doors are locked, and this one is the nearest to open. I'll let you in."

"Lie still!" my father's deep voice commanded. He was already on his way to the door, and had opened it by the time I had obeyed him and settled back into my pillows. To my surprise, when he had locked the door again he followed the young people to the kitchen, and it was nearly five minutes before he again came back to the porch.

I spent the interval in a renewal of the lively fears which had oppressed me before the arrival of the gay trailing party. I knew that my father never ate anything late at night, and I could not imagine him in the line of culinary guide to the youngsters. Had he been warning them against someone, or enlisting their aid to combat some threatened evil, of which I as yet knew nothing?

Near Hysteria

By the time he came back, I had worked myself into a state closely approaching the hysteria which he had so effectually quelled a little while before. But when I saw him coming toward me with a small covered tray in his hands, I realized how fantastic my fears had been.

"You ate practically nothing tonight," he said, as he set the tray upon the table and drew up a tiffin stand beside me, "so I am prescribing some hot milk and crackers for you now."

He set the tray upon the stand, and took away the cover, disclosing a pitcher of steaming milk, a plate of crackers and a silver shaker of salt, besides the usual glass, china and silver of a bedside tray. A half-opened rose lay beside the plate, and my father held it out to me with a smile.

"The purely feminine touch," he said. "Marion sent Ronald to get it while she and Carolyn prepared the tray. Weren't they dear?"

"Yes, but you are dearer," I told him lovingly, gratefully, as I sipped the hot milk, and I soon felt a modicum of confidence coming back to me.

Only, why did a sly little suggestion keep poking its head up into my consciousness — the thought that my father could well have given warnings galore and enlisted the aid of all six of the young people, while this bedside tray had been in preparation.

There are two miles of stores in Radio City. There are 54 floors. There are scores of elevator men, starters, guides, attaches, aides, etcetra . . . But there isn't a single telephone booth in the place! . . . How kind they are to the public . . . Gallagher's and the Hickory House are the two newest chophouses in the Broadway area—I like them both . . . Gallagher's has insured each waiter and cook, chef, et al—via the Elmer Leterman plan . . . Peggy Ames says to Artie Lewis: "Why did Dillinger use a wooden pistol?" to which Artie says: "Because that's the only kind that could scare a blockhead!"

Some of the girls are coloring their fingernails green—but many of them are having their palms henna'd! . . . Whatever became of the old-fashioned hotel register in New York, anyhow? . . . It used to be that you could glance at it and tell who was in the place . . . Bernie's gag is getting a laugh on the coast . . . It's the one where Ben, upon his first entrance, is startled. He then sighs and says: "For a moment I thought I saw Winchell. Pardon me, madam" . . . Hollywood, by the way, will do convulsive nip-ups when they find out what famous scenarist and which director had collab'd on "Every Other Inch A Gentleman," now in the mags.

Two hits shows which started out with 50 cent seats as a minimum have tilted 'em to a dollar . . . Dorothy Hall, who played a show girl in the ill-fated "The Pure in Heart," which closed after less than a week, played to but a handful of people—and she had these lines to say: "Wonder what it would be like to have an audience out there?" . . . Naturally the dozen or less out front howled . . . One of the better dancers in town is Katherine Vercell at the Continental Grill of the St. Moritz . . . Johnny Carey (remember The Nest in Harlem?) now runs the Saratoga Club on 139th—plenty gay.

Miss Jewell Desires Career

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, April 2.—Hello. So much has been said, and perhaps a great deal more has been written, of the devoted companionship of Lee Tracy and Isabel Jewell. And, like as not, much more will be chirped and considerable will be typed—it's that way in Hollywood.

Isabel, since leaving M-G-M, where she was under contract, wants to stand upon her own cinematic feet, as it were—and she desires most of all to make a celluloid name for herself. She's tired of being referred to as Lee Tracy's sweetie. Of course, she is! She admits that—they're good friends; in fact, quite daffy about each other, but she wants a film CAREER!

And she means in capital letters! Isabel has reached the stamping-of-the-foot stage and is definitely on the verge of saying this-and-that—if she can't have her own little way.

Although her engagement with M-G-M was most happy, she feels that being at another studio (meaning away from boy friend, Lee), that she has a better chance to prove herself. You know how people talk! And so it is to be!

* * *

If anyone is really interested, I think I can explain John Dillinger's presence in Southern California—if he is actually hiding here. He heard of the various film stories being written about his life, and he sorta wandered around to CHECK UP on the details. Nothing like having them correct, you know.

* * *

Wanderings around Hollywood . . . There's a certain young blonde actress-about-town who is wearing a WEDDING RING—and it's from a producer! . . . Junior Laemmle hasn't been out much of late, but he was a-skipping about (meaning dancing) with Gloria Stuart at the Cocoanut Grove the other midnight . . . Somebody asked Lou Greenspan what Nero played when he fiddled as Rome burned, and the classy Lou replied: "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," which is, or maybe it isn't, a smart answer . . . Universal is making a grand gesture, as it were, to sign George Bancroft to star in the "The Swiss Family Robinson," that old classic . . . Plaudits to Winnie Sheehan and Lew Brown for "Stand Up and Cheer." It's another of those so-called "naturals" . . . Peter Arno has BOWED OUT of the idea of doing a musical revue at a local theater . . . Johnny Weissmuller grabbed off a new long term ticket from M-G-M . . . Peter Ruric is doing the script of "The Suicide Club" for Universal . . . Jim McGuinness knows a blonde who is worse than those who don't know anything—She doesn't even SUSPECT anything! . . . You'd be AWFULLY SURPRISED if you knew what leading lady was getting a $20,000 automobile as a present from her boy friend.

* * *

* * *

Buzzing here and there. So you won't get stung! . . . It's baby buggy shopping time for the Steve Goossons, (formerly Mrs. John McCormack. Remember that Honolulu boat romance?) . . . Eddie Hillman is trying to get his ex-wifey, Dorothy Martin, a job in the flickers . . . Louis Zingone, the card trickster (he taught J. P. MORGAN some NIFTIES, you know), is doing a "deck" short for M-G-M, and has Muriel Evans and Irene Hervey as leading ladies.

Lawrence Tibbett, baritone, will give the closing May Beegle concert of the season in Syria Mosque tomorrow night.

George White 'Scandals' In Fulton

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The photoplay version of George White's "Scandals," noted stage revue, attracted large audiences to its opening in the Fulton Saturday, timed to begin shortly after the official departure of Lent at 12 o'clock.

The picture is a sort of hybrid insofar as classification is concerned, for it is neither a revue in the theatrical sense of the word nor a musical movie composed upon the customary formula, although that is possibly what it set out to be. That is, the dramatized trials of a director or a producer, an author—or somebody—that make an interesting story which is the background for the spectacular stuff.

It is true, there is such an attempt in "Scandals," but it is neither cohesive nor interesting, which leaves the spectacular stuff stand alone for consideration—and there is plenty of it. Which is to say that there are gorgeous settings and novel groupings of dancing girls to form the atmosphere of the song numbers, each projected in several sequences. Some of these sequences will be found objectionable because of their indelicacy.

Having got through with the belittling, let's take the other side for a while. There are plenty of good spots in the film, notably the comedy by Jimmy Durante, who just about dominates the show, and the pleasing surprise in the appearance of Alice Faye. After hearing her sing, you'll say, Rudy Vallee is a good picker, for the gal has a mellifluous voice, medium in tone, and a nice stage presence. She should go—well—farther, anyway.

Rudy Vallee sings in duets with Miss Faye and in a comedy trio with Cliff Edwards and Durante. Each of the latter also have solo numbers, that of Durante being in blackface, a mammy song burlesque.

Musically, the songs are all pleasing.

J. P. Barr, Democrat and former contractor, has been appointed Superintendent of Maintenance in the Bureau of Building Inspection, according to George E. Evans, superintendent. Barr, who is not a relative of the county commissioner, succeeds W. E. Burtt, dismissed. The job pays $3,000 a year.

Visitor Locked in Carnegie Museum

Police were called to the Carnegie Museum yesterday to liberate Thomas Stalides, of 152 Fourth avenue, Homestead, who had stayed after the institution was closed. After failing to summon anyone by shouting, Stalides telephoned Oakland police. He told them he was wandering around and became separated from his wife. He found his wife outside looking for him.

All In A Day

By MARK HELLINGER

The Phoney.

MR. CHUCK GRINCH, president of the Second Chance Society, placed his Carnera puppies on his battered desk and sighed contentedly.

"A soft job I got," he mused to himself. "And nobody can't say I ain't handlin' it like a major."

Mr. Grinch was quite correct. His job was exceptionally soft, and he was filling it perfectly. More, since his position was just about the only one of its kind in the world, he had few worries about competition.

The small gilt-lettered signs on the walls told something of the nature of the Second Chance Society. "Those Who Have Fallen Can Rise," was one. "We All Make Mistakes," was another. "Stick to the Straight and Narrow," was a third. There were many more of the same, and all just as dull.

The society had been founded by an ex-convict named Beggens, who wished to offer a chance to go straight to men who are released from prison. In Beggens' day, all you needed for financial help, with prospects of a job, was to be an ex-convict with a desire to reform.

Beggens had probably jimmied his way into heaven some five years before this story opens, and Chuck Grinch had walked right into his job. Chuck, my dear children, was most assuredly a man worth reforming. Having been a thief practically since the day he first started to walk, there isn't much doubt that he would have followed that occupation until the last day he walked—if it hadn't been for the soft racket he fell into.

As the president and—more important—treasurer of this strange society, Mr. Grinch was the monarch of all he gainsaid. His office staff was composed of ex-convicts; some with a genuine desire to go straight—to a bank vault.

Generous contributions from sympathetic citizens poured in with pleasant regularity, and Mr. Grinch did just about as he pleased with the money. He did some good for ex-convicts, and much better for himself. He lectured to the ex-convicts who were compelled to listen to him, and he enjoyed himself hugely as he pointed out the evils that befall crooks and phonies that refuse to go straight.

All in all, he was very much like the reformed drunkard who can't stand the sight of a drinking man who is enjoying himself. . . .

The door opened and Joe Potts walked in.

"You wanted to see me, Chuck?" he asked timidly.

"Yeah, Potts. Sit down. I got news for you. And since it ain't too good, you might as well take it sittin' down."

Potts edged into a chair. He was an elderly little man who looked as though he were perpetually frightened. Some six months before, he had walked into Mr. Grinch's office and told the old, familiar story.

He had been released from a mid-western prison, he said, after doing a stretch for burglary. He wanted very much to go straight, and he had sought work very diligently. But to no avail. Now he was broke and hungry. Could the Second Chance Society do something for him?

Mr. Grinch considered the case, gave Potts a lengthy lecture along his favorite lines—and placed the man at work in the Society's office. The newcomer had proved a conscientious worker. He never entered into any discussions with the other ex-convicts, and he attended strictly to business.

As a matter of fact, he was too good. Mr. Grinch always expected trouble from his peculiar help and, when it didn't arrive, he grew suspicious. When six months went by and Potts was the same tireless worker without a blot on his record, Chuck Grinch was certain that this man was up to no good. So he went out of his way to investigate the man's history.

"Potts," he growled, "when you came to work here, I told you all about this Society. You know all the other guys out there, and you know what they're doin'. They're poor mugs who're tryin' to forget phoney business an' phoney guys.

"So what happens? So for six months, a phoney bum like you is in between them, like a bad apple rottenin' the barrel." Chuck looked completely disgusted. "All I can say is I'm pretty lucky I got wise to you in time."

The little man seemed to be on the verge of passing out.

"I don't understand, Mr. Grinch," he trembled. "Aren't my accounts straight? Hasn't my work been right? I've tried my best and I really need the job."

Chuck nodded.

"Sure. You need the job all right. There's lotsa things we need in this world, but that don't mean we're gonna get 'em." He pounded the table. "You got a nerve, Potts. I've met plenty of phonies in my day, but you top 'em all as a double-crosser.

"It ain't as though I didn't try to help you. As president of the Second Chance Society, I done my best to see that you got a right break. So what happens? So now I learn that you ain't on the level with anybody—not even yourself.

"You're fired. You get out of this place right now, you understand? And you stay out. Because you're finished!"

Potts arose.

"Sure, Mr. Grinch," he whined. "I'll go. But, honest, I don't understand."

Chuck leaned back in his chair.

"Well," he sneered, "I'll make it a little plainer for you. I investigated—and I found out just what a phoney you are. Why, you never stole a nickel or did a bit in your whole life!"

Plays and Players

For the first time in a month and a half Pittsburgh has a legitimate theater attraction this week in "Annina," the new Rudolf Friml operetta that will open in the Nixon tonight. The last previous attraction in that theater was "Ten-Minute Alibi," week of February 12. That's how the theater is this particular A. D. Maria Jeritza, grand opera songbird, is the star of "Annina," and Allan Jones has the leading male role. Andrew Tombes is the comedian. A Chester Hale dancing ensemble is part of the show.

When "Richard of Bordeaux" comes to the Nixon next week Dennis King will be seen in the part of an English monarch, Richard II, whose dramatic career also was written up by Shakespeare. The new play, introduced in London more than a year ago, was written by a Scotch woman, under the nom de plume of Gordon Daviot, who is said to have spent seven years in research on her subject.

Celia Adler, member of the noted Adler family of Jewish players, will give a group of characterizations in the Y. M. & W. H. A., Bellefield avenue, next Sunday evening. Her program, on the lines of that followed on the English stage by Cornelia Otis Skinner, will include selections from noted Yiddish authors, and will include comedy, drama and folk music. Miss Adler is a daughter of the late Jacob R. Adler, who was a pioneer in the Yiddish theater.

COLLEGE CHOIR IN KNOXVILLE

A program of Russian, old Italian, English and American works will be presented by the Muskingum Capella Choir at the Knoxville United Presbyterian Church, Charles and Georgia streets, tomorrow night.

Included on the program will be an arrangement of "Alleluia! Christ Is Risen," by Harvey Gaul, Pittsburgh composer and critic.

The concert will be the first of the organization's 1934 series. Milton F. Rehg is director.

HEALTH DRIVE LAUNCHED HERE

Opening of the seventh annual health education campaign of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society was announced today by Dr. C. Howard Marcy, president, of Pittsburgh.

Declaring 5,000 deaths from tuberculosis were recorded in Pennsylvania last year, Dr. Marcy said:

"It is a communicable disease, and infection cannot be controlled by individuals alone.

"Public measures must be added to private steps to safeguard the milk and water supply. Likewise discovery of the disease when it can still be overcome call for the skill of the physician.

"Our public health authorities and voluntary health agencies during the last four years have fought disease with resourcefulness despite drastic cuts in budgets and workers. Our health record is a tribute to these efforts."

Physicians, official health agencies and welfare and civic organizations are co-operating in the drive.

DR. ABBA SILVER TO SPEAK HERE

Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, spiritual leader of the Temple, Cleveland's largest liberal Jewish Congregation, will speak on "The Changing Status of the Jew in the Modern World" at the Y. M. and W. H. A., Wednesday night.

It will be the first time in five years that Dr. Silver has spoken in Pittsburgh. He is a member of the National Child Labor Commission, the Commission on Militarism in Education, the American Civil Liberties Union and the National World Court Committee.

He is author of many articles on religious and sociological subjects and recently returned from ar eight-month tour of study in European countries.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Why don't I ever have dates?

And then Peggy's sister-in-law gave her a hint that helped her win popularity, romance . . .

OH, WHAT'S THE USE—WHY DON'T I EVER HAVE DATES LIKE THE OTHER GIRLS DO?
YOU'RE AS PRETTY AS ANY OF THEM, BUT SOMETIMES—TELL ME DO YOU LUX YOUR UNDERTHINGS EVERY DAY?
ONE CAN'T RISK OFFENDING OTHERS WITH PERSPIRATION ODOR IN UNDERTHINGS—LUX TAKES AWAY ODOR, YET SAVES COLORS
HOW AWFUL OF ME! I'LL NEVER OFFEND AGAIN
A FEW WEEKS LATER
FOR YOU AGAIN, PEG
TAKE GOOD CARE OF HER, BILL
YOU BET I WILL—I'D LIKE TO TAKE CARE OF HER FOR LIFE
LUX
Won't shrink woolens won't fade colors
NRA
It's safe in water it's safe in LUX

—removes perspiration odor from underthings—saves colors

AVOID OFFENDING

Protect daintiness this easy way . . .

IT'S such a pity to miss out on dates and popularity because of this unforgivable fault!

Underthings are constantly absorbing perspiration and others notice the odor before we do. Yet there is one sure way to avoid offending. Lux underthings after each wearing.

Lux removes perspiration odor completely—saves colors, too! Ordinary soaps with harmful alkali and cake-soap rubbing tend to fade and weaken silk. Gentle Lux has no harmful alkali—and with Lux there's no rubbing. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux!

Hello Ladies and Gentlemen:

If guns could only tell of their adventures what a story could be related by the Civil War revolver recently acquired by Arthur Lohr, of Carnegie.

The pistol saw service in many of the glorious history making battles of the war between the states.

It was at Bull Run and expended its deadly charges of bullets there. It saw service at Drainesville, famed Antietam, Stafford County courthouse. It spoke at the Battle of the Wilderness. For three days it barked at rebel soldiers at Gettysburg helping to turn back the advancing tide of the Confederacy.

Today it bears mute evidence of those encounters. Mr. Lohr after acquiring the revolver cleaned it and in so doing took apart the butt. Concealed therein was a piece of paper worn with years and upon it in fading ink the story of its service in the war.

The gun belonged to the writer. His name was Capt. Charles Becker, "Co. B," 9th Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves who served throughout the entire four years of battling.

O. D. Walker—The little white cards given out by the Registration Boards are not necessary for voting or any other purpose. Some voters got them and some did not. If any one wants a card certifying that he is a registered voter, he may have one by calling at the Registration Commissioners Office in the new County Office Building.

They're good to have in case you get into an argument about being a voter. You can flash the card and say

"See, I'm a registered voter."

On Wednesday of this week at 12:15 we are going to have as our guest Mrs. Julia Pitcock the National President of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary.

She will have an interesting message. Be sure to be tuned in.

New Luxury Liners To Take Off Here

Seek Trio Armed With Machine Gun

Police today were searching for a large sedan reported to contain three men, two of whom had a machine gun in the tonneau. Mort Aiken, proprietor of Aiken's Garage, Main street, West End, reported that his 16-year-old attendant, had observed the machine gun when the car pulled into the garage for water.

for electricity users

This man pays 3c for his evening paper . . . an inconsiderable amount to be sure . . . still it's more than it costs to light his favorite reading lamp (with three 40-watt lamps) for 6 hours. Electric light is now so inexpensive that he wouldn't be without plenty of it . . . it's a protection to his eyesight, and makes the reading of his newspaper more enjoyable. But electricity has made dozens of things possible for him and his family to enjoy for the same small amount. 3c operates an electric toaster, a percolator or a waffle-iron for 1 hour and 8 minutes, and an electric bath-room stove for almost an hour. This man knows that he is getting his money's worth in his electric service . . . a service available night or day in his own home, at the snap of a switch.

The length of time the appliances named in this advertisement can be operated is based on 6c per Kwh., in which classification a large percentage of our customers come. If your use of electricity entitles you to the advantages of a 3c rate you can operate the same appliances proportionately longer. Those who use between 15 and 30 Kwh per month come under the 5c rate and can, therefore, operate these appliances only four-fifths of the length of time stated.

Big League Games Will Be Aired

By AIRCASTER

Sport fans hereabouts are to hear all baseball games that the Pittsburgh Pirates play away from home the coming season.

Hugh Brennan, general manager of KQV, has completed arrangements with the various clubs in the National League to broadcast the out-of-Pittsburgh contests.

Jimmy Murray, former newspaperman who has been giving KQV and WJAS listeners an aerial account of sports events of all sorts the past several years, will handle the baseball broadcasts, recreating the games play-by-play hot off the ticker tape.

To pave the way for the forthcoming series, Murray will begin a 15-minute period of baseball comment on KQV tomorrow night at 6:15, bringing his listeners the news of the training camps and discussing the prowess and personalities of outstanding big leaguers.

FAN MAIL

Thought I had tabbed all the odd fan mail, but that letter from a convent in Maryland to Molly Berg, of "The Goldbergs," is tops.

During Lent, the girl students were forbidden radio, and had to miss the episodes, so the letter asks for the original scripts, to bring the would-be listeners up to date.

From Ma Ferguson's office in Austin, Tex., one learns that Kate Smith has become the first she-Texas ranger.

Of a sudden, on seeing Lanny Ross, on the screen, by the way, it dawns on you that he is a swell actor.

WORLD FAITHFUL MARK EASTER WITH PRAYER

Associated Press.

All the creeds of Christendom joined yesterday in halleujahs for the risen Lord as they celebrated Easter in song, service and festivities.

In Jerusalem, where Christ made his triumphal entry, thousands of Christians from all over the globe knelt in adoration at his tomb. Temple bells rang out paens of praise calling the faithful to worship.

RITES AT MOSQUE

Mohammedans flocked to the Mosque of Omar to pray before the sacred stone as a prelude to a pilgrimage to one of their holy places, the site of the tomb of Moses. Christian and pagan brushed shoulders without disorders.

Rome, the city that nurtured the Catholic church, was filled by thousands of the devoted, who went to the Vatican to hear Pope Pius XI give his Easter message and canonize Don Giovanni Bosco, celebrated social worker of the Nineteenth century, as a saint.

SUNRISE SERVICES

In the United States citizens knelt in sunrise services, jammed churches and joined in Easter cantatas.

The nation's capital celebrated with two attractions—the President and the usual cherry blooms—absent.

President Roosevelt, on vacation aboard a yacht in the blue waters of the Bahamas, laid aside his rod and reel to commemorate the holiday quietly. The cold weather preceeding yesterday's sunshine retarded the Easter debut of the cherry blossoms.

WHITE HOUSE PARTY

Acting for the President, Mrs Roosevelt attended sunrise services in Arlington National Cemetery. At the same time the ill and wounded of the World War held services in the Walter Reed Military Hospital. Mrs. Roosevelt later attended St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

Not all the celebration, however, was religious. The fashionable paraded in finery. In New York the weather man relented after a contemplated April fool joke of rain, the sun peeped out and the 400 and lesser lights took to the avenues in colorful costume.

McNair to Autograph Eggs at Schenley Park

His Honor Takes Time Off to Visit Party

Amid the multiplicity of duties Mayor McNair took time off this afternoon to participate in an egg rolling party. He was to autograph some of the eggs.

On the slopes of Schenley Park, His honor was to greet the youngsters after the manner of White House egg rolling festivities.

There were no speeches but a 40-piece band of the Civil Works Administration provided music.

Toy Animals "Steal" Show at White House

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(AP.)—Thousands of children scampered over the broad White House lawns today, their attention divided between the traditional Easter-time egg-rolling and a truckload of brilliantly colored mechanical animals which roared and writhed most realistically.

Within half an hour after the gates were thrown open, members of the presidential family greeted their guests.

"Buzzie" Dall, the President's grandson, held high in the arms of his mother, Mrs. Anna Dall, gazed in awe at the pseudo-animals mounted on a truck. But when he was asked if he liked them, he replied emphatically, "Yes!"

"Sistie's" face also indicated that she considered the animals rather awesome, but she insisted she enjoyed them.

A crowd smaller than usual clustered about the portico when Mrs. Roosevelt, in a bright blue gown; Mrs. Dall, in a dress of bright red, with collar and belt of gold; "Buzzie" and "Sistie" came out to the portico. Said Mrs. Roosevelt:

"My husband, though he is not here, sends you all his greetings."

Small boys and girls were heard to remark that they liked egg rolling better when the Presidential family came down in the crowd instead of just waving from the portico.

The animal truck proved so fascinating that most of the eggs were just lugged around in baskets.

Jewels, Cash, Watch Eastertide Booty

Thieves broke into the home of Eva Bloom, at 209 Dinwiddie street, late last night, and escaped with $830 cash, a diamond ring valued at $250, and a watch valued at $50, she reported to detectives.

Two men held up Thomas J. Clark, of 7342 Race street, at Torrance street and Frankstown avenue, and obtained jewelry and cash valued at $82.

BALMY WEATHER PREDICTED FOR TOMORROW

A bright, balmy Easter that called forth throngs to religious worship and a brilliant fashion parade was matched by equally summer-like weather today.

Before the time for the thousands to wend their way to flower and palm-bedecked churches, the sun broke through the clouds to accentuate the joyous spirit of the day.

In the afternoon, long lines of people moved slowly along the walks leading to Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park, waiting to view the annual Easter display of lilies and other blooms.

3 WOMEN HURT WHEN STOLEN CAR CRASHES

The injured were Mrs. Mildred Vidovich, 21, of 1412 Merchant street, Aliquippa, wife of Michael Vidovich, driver of one of the cars; Mrs. Helen Broderick, 53, and Ellen Bradick, 50, both of 196 Baker street, Aliquippa.

Two young men in the other car, which, police said, had been stolen 15 minutes before the crash, fled after the accident, according to the report.

The car was reported to be driven by John Irwin, 28, of 317 North Dallas avenue, who suffered a minor injury.

When his car struck a pole at Hobart street and Murray avenue, Stephen Andolina, 45, of 6445 Nicholson street, was injured, according to police.

Sylvester Parkley, 11, of 328 Renova street, was injured when he was struck near his home by an automobile driven by S. J. Goldstein, of Ohio avenue, Glassport, according to a police report.

Mary White, 17, and her sister, Anna, 6, both of 231 Edmond street, were injured when an automobile, driven by their father, Robert White, collided with another machine driven by George West, 41, of 335 South Negley avenue, according to a police report. The collision occurred at Fortieth and Butler streets.

M'Knight Heiress Fights Lawyer Fees in Court

Many Legal Battles Over Soho Leader's $105,000 Estate

Another of the numerous battles over the $105,000 estate left by Paddy McKnight, late political leader of Soho, was fought in Orphans Court today.

Madeline McKnight, the sole beneficiary of her father's estate, argued, through Attorney Maurice L. Avner, against payment of $13,200 in fees—$5,200 for Attorney Howard Neely, the executor; $5,000 for Attorney Howard Zacharias, counsel for the executor, and $3,000 for J. Frank McKenna, counsel for the Potter Title and Trust Company, her guardian.

Avner contended that these fees represented 24 per cent of the estate, arguing that only $54,000 has been liquidated.

Aged Man Slashes Neck While Shaving

James Andrews, 80, of 518 South Mathilda street, was recovering in West Penn Hospital today from an injury received while shaving in his home late yesterday. Homicide Detective James O'Kane said the aged man suffered a severe cut on the throat when his razor slipped. Seven stitches were required to close the laceration.

ACTION LINKS WORLD WAR AWARDS

The Aluminum Company of America, controlled by Mellon interests, today filed three suits to recover $679,453 from the government.

The suits charged that this sum had been erroneously collected as income taxes for the years 1926, 1927 and 1828.

Filing of the action recalled World War days inasmuch as part of the disputed sum involved taxes on awards made to the Aluminum Company by the German government through a Mixed Claims Commission.

The German government in 1927 awarded the company $34,174 for aluminum seized by German military forces at Antwerp, Belgium, in 1914, and an additional $11,887 for the loss of aluminum bronze powder in the sinking of the Lusitania on May 7, 1915.

The suits were filed through the law firm of Smith, Buchanan, Scott and Gordon, and represent the claims of the Aluminum Company and 30 affiliated companies.

Chinese Balance Sheet

MISS NEW GEE LEE . . . A RENDERING OF ACCOUNTS

Miss Lee examining the red-and-black balance sheet posted at the headquarters of the On Leong Tong in Third avenue by the Chinese room committee—the group heading the arrangement for a Pitt Cathedral Chinese room. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Gift From R. B. Mellon Aids Pitt's Chinese Room

Rendering their spring account, the Chinese room committee for the Cathedral of Learning has posted a red and black balance sheet and statement on the bulletin board of the On Leong Tong, Third avenue, headquarters of Pittsburgh's Chinese colony.

On the left, the smaller figures list the total contributions. A gift of $1,000 from the late R. B. Mellon and another of $200 from T. V. Soong, Chinese minister of finance, who recently visited Washington, helps to swell the total to $3,047.48. Other gifts are from Chinese of Chicago and Detroit.

The whole room is to cost approximately $5,000. The committee has conducted a campaign to raise the money for several years, and as the Cathedral nears completion, they plan to redouble their efforts. Mrs. William H. Vet, a committee member, will make a trip to Boston and New York soon to request donations from Chinese communities there.

Samuel Kwok Ying Fung, the committee secretary, said today that the committee will probably invite Chao Mei-pa, famous Chinese tenor, to Pittsburgh to give a benefit concert.

The Chinese room will be one of the most beautiful and brilliant of all the nationality rooms planned for the Cathedral. In the center of the ceiling, painted red, blue and gold, a golden dragon holds in its mouth the "Pearl of Knowledge," a glowing globe lighting the room. Most of the furnishings and carvings for this room are already stored in the Cathedral. John H. Tsui is chairman of the committee. The architect of the room was Teng Kwei, head of the Fine Arts Department of the University of Yenching.

TWO 'TOMS' ASK NEW TRIAL

The "Three Toms" of Monaca club fame came to a parting of the ways in Criminal Court today.

Two of them, Tom Coyne and Tom (Goose) Goslin, through their counsel, John Duggan, Jr., asked Judge Thomas M. Marshall for a new trial, on their conviction of maintaining a gambling house and being common gamblers.

"He had a fair trial, was convicted and is ready to stand sentence."

Judge Marshall postponed sentence pending disposition of the motion of the other two.

All three were found guilty last Thursday on testimony of State Police who had raided the swanky club, opposite Oakland police station, a year ago.

The maximum penalty for being a common gambler is five years and $500 fine; for maintaining a gambling house, one year in jail and $500 fine.

DONORA BRIDE DIES BY GUN

DONORA, Pa., April 2.—A bride of three weeks shot and killed herself, according to County Detective William B. Dinsmore, early today, while her 50-year-old husband was entertaining two guests in their home here.

The husband, Frank Gaudio, 50, and the guests, Salvatoi Aquino, of Farrell, and James Greco, Donora, were detained, but were released later after Dinsmore said a boy had corroborated their story that the woman killed herself.

Mrs. Gaudio was 32 years old. William Gaff, 9, said he was in the store buying candy when he heard a shot. He said the husband and the other men ran into the house adjoining the store and found Mrs. Gaudio dead.

FIFTY COUNTIES IN SPELLING BEE

Fifty counties have entered their champion spellers in the state-wide championship spelling bee scheduled for Wednesday in Harrisburg as a feature of the Pennsylvania free school centennial, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

By proclimation of Gov. Pinchot, the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the signing of the free school act starts today. The Department of Public Instruction is holding the spelling bee.

Housewives outnumber other occupations represented by the spellers. Others entered include laborers, clerks, reporters, ministers, salesmen, a lawyer, a plasterer, lumberman, millworker, painter, farmer and mail carrier.

Due to the illness of Mrs. R. H. George, winner of Allegheny County's bee, which was sponsored by the Pittsburght Sun-Telegraph, Ted Epstein, of Idlewild street, alternate, will go to Harrisburg for the final "spell-down."

Mrs. George, who lives on the Thompson Run road, Ross Township, is recovering in the Homeopathic Hospital, following an operation. The Sun-Telegraph awarded her a cash prize.

MOTORCYCLIST LANDS IN JAIL

Charged with driving a motorcycle while under the influence of liquor, Albert High, 25, of Spring Garden avenue, was in Oakmont Police Station today after he allegedly drove a score of children to cover while riding through Oakmont streets last night.

High was en route to a christening, according to police, when he started his zig-zag tactics with his motorcycle. Several groups of children playing in Fifth street in Oakmont were forced to seek shelter when he lost control of his cycle, police claim.

Finally, Police Chief Charles Helwig cornered him with his automobile at the end of the street. A physician examined High at the police station and pronounced him under the influence of liquor, police said. His bond was set at $1,000 pending a hearing tonight.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., April 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Not much news last couple of days from Astor's fishing smack. Pretty nice of England to let our President fish in their ocean.

Speaking of oceans, our grand fleet of 110 ships have to leave this coast this week. Japan says they have been in their ocean long enough. We are about the only nation that has a fleet, but no ocean to put it on.

The thing we ought to do is dig a canal right smack dab across the U. S. from east to west, then when there is objections from the proprietors of the Atlantic and Pacific, we could exercise in our own waters, something we can't do now. Yours, WILL.

BITING RABBIT ESCAPES KNIFE

International News Service.

CHICAGO, April 2.—From the very shadow of the guillotine Brer Peter Rabbit today was rescued by the National Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Belgian hares and by ambiguity.

Peter put himself and butcher Carl Wehbrum to shame through his promiscuous appetite. He nipped the fingers of three children and was condemned to death.

Way out in Iowa the shocking news filtered. From the Des Moines chapter of the Rabbit Guardians Society came this telegraphic reprimand:

"Cannot too strongly protest ruthless police execution of Chicago Easter bunny which bit three children. Even rabbits entitled to fair treatment. Easter rabbits should be given special consideration."

Rockefeller Misses Easter Services

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., April 2.—(AP.)—Although a brilliant sun brought perfect weather to Ormond Beach, John D. Rockefeller did not join the church-going throngs and missed his first Easter service in years.

He sent his usual Sunday floral offering to the Ormond Congregational Church, but confined his activities to puttering about the grounds of his estate and taking an afternoon drive.

Police Order Hill Stores To Close on Sunday

Police said they were acting upon the instructions of Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall and Inspector John Schnurr.

Marshall was quoted as saying the order was the result of a complaint by the Hill District Business Men's Association that charged the Hill merchants were violating the NRA by failing to close one day a week.

Joseph Wissman, head of the association, said he heard of the order, but was reported to have denied knowledge of what caused it.

The order does not affect restaurants and pharmacies, and kosher butcher shops may stay open until 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

What with our drizzly weather turning to sunshine yesterday, Pittsburgh's Easter paraders blossomed forth like roses in new spring costumes and the customary corsages.

Navy blue and white and black and white combinations were favored by the society women who attended St. Paul's Cathedral and Shadyside Presbyterian Church yesterday morning. I saw Mrs. E. P. Mellon II, with her mother, Mrs. Stephen Stone, and both were wearing black with touches of white with black hats and corsages of jardenias.

Wide Brimmed Hat Worn With Grey Costume

I noticed Mrs. A. P. Brill chatting with friends after the service, and for her Easter costume had chosen grey crepe with a wide brimmed gray hat and corsage of orchids.

Mrs. E. V. Babcock was wearing dark blue crepe with a chinchilla cape and orchids. The Samuel Harden Churches were at Shadyside, too, as was Virginia Frew Wright, in navy blue crepe with a blue coat and scarf of polka dotted blue taffeta. I noticed her chatting with James K. Ebbert and Mrs. Nelson Vance Harper.

At the Cathedral was Mrs. Joseph Bialas, in black; Mrs. George Shanahan, in black and white crepe and a corsage of gardenias, with her two daughters, Dorothy, in a suit of green wool, and Louise in a blue coat and hat. Mrs. James B. Kelly and her daughter, Sara Marie, I caught a glimpse of, too. And little Mary Ann McHugh was with her sister, Nancy. Both wore pert costumes of yellowish-green wool with capes and matching hats, and young Patsy Gillis wore brown.

Gertrude McKee Bride of Paul J. Urquhart

Miss Gertrude McKee and Paul J. Urquhart, both of the East End, were married this morning in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Hugh Thomson Kerr, the pastor.

Evelyn Bitner Becomes Bride Of Homestead Park Man At Home Wedding

Simplicity characterized the Easter eve wedding of Miss Evelyn Bitner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Murray Bitner, of Pelham Manor, New York, formerly of Pittsburgh, and Karl Henry Pearson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Axel B. Pearson, of Homestead Park, Pa.

Only the families of the bride and bridegroom attended the ceremony, which took place Saturday night at 7 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents with the Rev. Willard Soper, of the Huguenot Memorial Church, Pelham, N. Y., officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore traditional white satin. Her gown was fashioned with a brief jacket and train of Alencon lace. Her veil of tulle cascaded from an unusual coronet, all of lace.

Her maid of honor and only attendant was Miss Helen McCreery, of Pittsburgh. Ladley Pearson, of Homestead Park, was his brother's best man. There were no ushers.

Mr. Pearson and his bride will be at home in 245 East Seventy-second street, New York.

Kilbuck Plays To Be Given This Week

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Tonight is to be directors' night at the Kilbuck Theater presentation of the three plays which will be given each evening this week and Saturday matinee as a benefit for the Congress of Clubs' literature department. The theater, which is in the basement of "Kilbuck," the historic old McKnight home in Western avenue and now the home of the theater's director, Robert Allen Green, and Mrs. Green, is intended to encourage and develop amateur theatrical talent—acting, writing or directing.

Although Mr. Green will direct this week's presentations, the little place will be available for other amateur groups eager to try their histrionic wings. The theater is painted in soft silver to emphasize the lighting effect, while on the wall are decorations of black. Black plush curtains drape the proscenium. The stage is arranged with "troughs" to hold the scenery, so that before the curtain rises on a performance, the scenes are ready for any three acts and each needs only the removal of the drop in front of it to be "set."

The Congress plays are "The Look," by Mrs. Stewart C. McFarland, chairman of the literature department; "Summer Cottage," by Mrs. May T. Neff, former chairman, and "The One Thing Needful," an Easter play, by Alberta Wilson.

How's your after-Easter personality? How's your new-hatched-Spring-chicken feeling holding out . . . or did yesterday's "peerade" take all the starch out of you? Do you grow faint at the thoughts of any more dressing-upping than you have already been through? Because, we have designs upon you . . . on your hair, at any rate . . . and far be it from us to waste this on deaf ears.

Beginning with this thing called a hair cut (too often "called" a haircut and not really BEING one!) Now wouldn't you think that when there is one of the best hair-cutters to be had for 50c . . . a man who goes snip-snip so cleverly than you emerge with a new "personality" . . . wouldn't you think that female forms would cluster 'round without further delay?

Note: Let us say right here, that all the items we are mentioning today are not THE CHEAPEST . . . but they're (so we feel) the best FOR THE MONEY And after all . . . who wants to take chances with her hair? So you in need of a haircut . . . gallop hither . . . and be assured that no "sugar-bowl" line will mar the back of your neck . . . nor will you return with that "scalped" effect!

Gentlemen must prefer you . . so a white henna is in order for blondes. A white henna that will only cost you $1.00 . . . which is unheard of for this price. Also the better known regular Egyptian henna with all its mahogany allure . . for darker haired beauties. These are both given at a shop by an operator who used to be with one of the town's most heralded salons (now out of existence) . . . and when she gives you a henna . . . you stay hennaed! None of this slap-it-on-and-run with her . . . it's the real thing, done in the right way—a matter of utmost importance to all henna-ites we find.

* * *

Now, if you are a dry and brittle female whose wig is always in danger of being utterly parched . . . then these words are for you.

Words about the special offer which is extant just now . . . a combination shampoo with castile soap and soft water . . . oil treatment for your scalp . . . and a finger wave with quick-drying solution (better than those thick gummy kinds some shops use!) All this . . . every bit it it . . . for $1.00. And just try to beat it if you can!

* * *

A braid to wrap 'round your own locks. A braid in any color . . . a good length . . . and priced at $2.00. The royal road to becoming regal! And if you think these are easy to find . . . you might set aside a whole day for your tramping and shopping . . . for you won't find them at less!

If you want to save America from European entanglements and keep your country out of foreign wars, and foreign wars out of your country, sign this petition:

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

We protest AGAINST the United States participating in the League of Nations or in the World Court of the League of Nations, with or without "reservations."

We petition our Federal Government to keep our United States "free from foreign entanglements," as the Father of Our Country wisely enjoined.

We urge our Congress at Washington to keep our government from meddling in foreign affairs, and to keep foreign nations from meddling in our American affairs.

As loyal American citizens, we ask our loyal representatives to keep our country out of foreign conflicts and complications and to keep foreign conflicts and complications out of our country.

NAME	ADDRESS

Additional names may be added to this petition by pasting a sheet of paper hereto. PRESENTED through the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

Priests Fight American Adherence to League

Latrobe Clergy Join Veterans Against Entanglements

More than 15,000 persons have signed petitions protesting against the United States participating in the League of Nations or the World Court, since the Sun-Telegraph opened its drive for signatures less than three weeks ago. Petitions are being received from all parts of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio, from patriotic organizations, from civic groups and from colleges and universities.

A petition bearing more than 70 names has been received from St. Vincent Arch Abbey at Latrobe, Pa. Among the signers were more than a score of priests, including the Right Rev. Alfred Koch, arch abbot of the Arch Abbey. From the same institution came a request for six more blanks which are being filled at the college store.

PHILA. VETS ENROLL

The Pittsburgh district is just one part of the nation which is responding to the opportunity to register protest to attempts of propagandists to force this nation into foreign alliances Throughout the entire country thousands of petitions are being received daily by the Hearst newspapers.

To enable everyone to place their signature on the petition, it has been decided to present the petition in sections. As the first installment of the petition, the Hearst newspapers are ready to submit the names of more than a half million loyal citizens to the Senate. There will be a second, a third, and even other installments from time to time.

ALL URGED TO SIGN

To make the protest heard as quickly as possible, however, it is urged that everyone sign the petitions as quickly as possible. The petition will be presented to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. It is planned to continue the campaign until there can remain no doubt in the mind of the Senate as to the real attitude of the nation.

To make the representation as wide-spread as possible, volunteer workers are earnestly urged to enlist in the petition campaign. Petition blanks have been prepared so that every citizen who will heed, may have one or more on which to secure the signature of their friends, acquaintances and associates.

Sees War If Hitler Economic Plan Fails

War will be the inevitable outcome of the Nazi policies unless Hitler succeeds in his economic program, Martin Plettl, former head of the German Garment Makers' Union, declared in an address in the Socialist Lyceum, on the North Side, yesterday. Plettl came to the United States after he escaped from prison, to which he had been sentenced by the Hitler government.

The meeting was fraught by interruptions from Nazi supporters, and at one time it appeared that it would end in fighting. Plettl spoke in German.

Admirer Slays Wife of Convict

SCRANTON, Pa., April 2.—(INS.) — Mrs. Mary Lahotsky, pretty 22-year-old laundry worker, was shot and killed at her home in Dickson City today during a quarrel with Walter Zipkowski, 25, of South Scranton, according to the police.

The officers said Zipkowski admitted slaying the woman with whom he had been keeping company. She was the wife of a man now in the Eastern Penitentiary.

DEATH TAKES PASTOR, 100

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., April 2.—The Rev. Jacob F. Snyder, who observed his one hundredth birthday a few days ago, and was the oldest graduate of Heidelberg (O.) College, is dead at the home of his son.

The aged minister, who was refused admission to the Union Army during the Civil War because he failed to meet the physical requirements, was to have been honored at a special church service and birthday dinner commemorating his birthday March 24. He was prevented from attending the festivities by illness.

He was pastor of Emmanual's Reformed Church at Export for 35 years.

The Rev. Mr. Snyder was believed to have been the first Reformed church minister in the United States to reach the age of 100. He was ordained in 1865 and served as minister at a number of Western Pennsylvania churches.

NEW STAVISKY DUEL FUTILE

CARCASSONNE, France, April 2.—(AP.) — Pistols barked again today in the second political duel since the Bayonne banking scandal shook France, but—as in the previous encounter—nobody was hurt.

The combatants were Deputy Jean Mistler, minister of commerce in the cabinet of former Premier Edouard Daladier, and Roger De Tour, royalist leader.

The harmless exchange of shots on a rifle range near Carcassonne was arranged to settle a political quarrel which reached a climax when De Tour slapped Mistler Saturday night. The two left the field unreconciled.

The duel was an indirect outgrowth of the bloody Paris riots. De Tour, leader of the Carcassonne royalists, called Mistler an "ignoble person" because Mistler was a member of the Daladier cabinet.

The duelists, standing at 20 paces, raised their pistols at exactly 7 a. m. Two shots sounded. Both missed.

Court Clerk Blames Legal Staff for Delay

Entering the controversy rising from the Terminal Warehouse and Transfer Company case against the city, Jack Moore, chief clerk of Common Pleas Court, has come to the defense of Judge Harry H. Rowand's action by striking back at the City Law Department.

Moore blamed the city legal staff for waiting until the case was called for trial before asking for postponement on a plea of unpreparedness.

The chief clerk said he opposed any delay, on grounds the Law Department had been given ample time to have obtained a postponement earlier. He said:

"We needed this case for trial when it was called, to keep the court lists from breaking down. It was because of my objection that Judge Rowand ordered the case tried."

The trial resulted in a verdict for the warehouse company, and afterward City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully issued a statement assailing Judge Rowand's forcing the trial.

The City Law Department in turn was criticized by Judge Elder W. Marshall in granting a new trial. Judge Marshall assailed the Law Department for not assigning a veteran attorney to the case.

Fuel was added to the controversy by the charge of former Assistant City Solicitor Benjamin L. Steinberg that he was dismissed by Scully for political reasons and had not been asked to remain with the department to prepare its defense against the warehouse company's suit.

ARTIST AT 70 IN FIRST U. S. SHOW

Heberer's Paintings To Be Displayed in Gulf Gallery

By PENELOPE REDD

The affair of arranging his first exhibition in America at the age of 70 is no small matter to Charles Heberer. He has worked for two months making frames to inclose his paintings done during the last 10 years. His exhibition will be on view at the Gulf Gallery through the first two weeks of April.

Miss Redd.

Ten years ago, Charles Heberer commenced life anew. Originally from St. Louis, he went to Paris to study at Julian's Academy during the heyday of Lefevre and Constant. He stayed through youth, maturity, and to the edge of age. Having married a French woman he seemed thoroughly Gallicized. Living near Chartres all during the Great War and finding it impossible to paint, he and Mrs. Heberer made their patriotic contribution by helping their farm neighbors to harvest the crops.

RETURNS TO U. S.

Ten years ago, Charles Heberer closed his little villa, leaving canvases representing years of work, also the antique furniture he had gathered, and with a few treasured paintings by the French and other masters, he set forth for America.

Mr. Heberer, through Pittsburgh friends, came here and presently found a most unusual residence in the old Anderson homestead near North Park. The log cabin, built 130 years ago, is a well preserved example of the pioneer dwelling in this district, handsomely proportioned and distinguished in craftsmanship.

Once established in his pastoral surroundings, Charles Heberer devoted himself to painting the gentle poetry of the north hills of Allegheny County.

MENDER OF WATCHES

Strangely enough his artist's instinct for selecting the essentials necessary for his chosen way of life, coincides with the theories now advanced by economists.

Mr. Heberer is the unofficial watch mender of his neighborhood; he secures his substenance in large part from his few acres; and he works assiduously at his profession. The major portion of his time is reserved for the transposition of quiet beauty to the medium of paint that others, too, may participate in his explorations of the spirit.

He is a man that the young painters of the community should know.

Officials Aid Pupils to Enroll

History has assumed a more important significance for thousands of students in public and parochial schools in Greater Pittsburgh and the Tri-State district.

The Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition has been the impetus as students study the effect on American life and progress that followed nine important events in the nation's history. Their impressions will be written in 600 words as stipulated in the rules formulated by the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission for the Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers. These newspapers are conducting the nation-wide competition that provides an opportunity to every man, woman and child to contribute to the endeavor that will result in the selection of a final inscription to be carved on the South Dakota mountainside.

Superintendents in 21 school districts have directed active participation through arranging to assist pupils to submit their text entries. Every high and grade school pupil should read the special rules published today in an adjoining column. The rules apply to all school entrants, whether or not their school districts have adopted special arrangements.

Procedures for students in Pittsburgh's three universities will be announced in tomorrow's paper.

Every college and school student is invited to participate. Remember that the grade school pupils do not compete against high school students. The latter do not write against the college students. All entrants are divided in four groups—adults, college and university students, high school pupils and grade school pupils.

1—Writing of the Declaration of Independence.

2—Drafting of the American Constitution.

3—Purchase of Louisiana.

4—Ceding of the Floridas to the United States.

5—Entry of Texas to the Union as a state.

6—The Mexcan War and the acquisition of California.

8—The Alaska purchase.

9—Building of the Panama Canal.

Read the special article on Texas appearing on this page. It is but one of a series appearing daily in the Sun-Telegraph as helpful hints to entrants.

SOFT ELEGANCE IN THE WARDROBES FOR SPRING

By PRUNELLA WOOD.

APRIL FIRST inevitably calls home the last fashionables from their Southern meanderings, and with Easter set for the same date we can expect to see ravishing costumes worn at the late Spring evening affairs in town. There is a great feeling for elegance still hovering over styles, despite the imminence of lazy, hot days.

It would take a couple of witches to predict whether the newest fancy in formal evening gowns—the funnel typhoon business on the back of a skirt—is going to be part of the mode for long, but it may point the way to more reasonable skirt treatments, such as the model sketched center, below.

The picture frock sketched center is a gorgeous revival of a gorgeous fabric—Pompadour taffeta, in shades of orchid and old rose. Notice the tunic pannier at the front of the skirt, for it shows how decoratively the newer short length can be treated. The looped bow over the shoulder back is also noteworthy.

Left, a vivid flower print on crepe is used effectively. Splashing red and flashes of green are its main color scheme. The front decolletage is low and square, finished with bold jewelled clips at either corner. The train is a sash, easily managed for dancing.

Cotton for evening once more is demonstrated in this navy blue-dotted white net. It is an "automotive" design, featuring a streamline back which slithers off into a split train, and wings which fly behind either shoulder when the model is moving.

SCHOOLS MARK CENTENNIAL

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, April 2.—Pennsylvania today entered the second centennium of its free public schools, a system which became operative 100 years ago yesterday, when the Common Schools Law was signed.

Schools, pupils and educators from all over the state have joined in a week of celebration of the centennial anniversary. A program sponsored by the Department of Public Instruction will officially start the celebration Tuesday evening. Other events are scheduled for Wednesday.

Included in the state-wide program to be held here will be revivals of the old-fashioned spelling bee, in which county champions from nearly every county are to participate, and an old-time singing school of the "little red schoolhouse" variety.

Local programs throughout the state will supplement the celebration here, in response to Gov. Gifford Pinchot's proclamation declaring this Education Week.

ENTRY OF TEXAS INTO UNITED STATES RELATED

Dramatic Battle For Freedom Described

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth of a series of articles by Mr. Woodhouse on the nine episodes in American history that are to be recounted in the Mt. Rushmore Memorial.)

By HENRY WOODHOUSE

Texas exemplifies in many ways those American qualities which President Roosevelt has urged upon the contestants for the prizes offered by the Hearst newspapers for the best text for the Mt. Rushmore Memorial inscription.

The historic records of "The rise of the Republic of Texas and its entry to the Union as a state" present a dramatic, inspiring picture of the building of an empire in less than a century, by those American qualities which President Roosevelt defined as:

"The pioneer spirit, the creative urge, which led our people to populate the various areas which from time to time came into our nation."

Ranking first in area as a state, Texas could accommodate in its territory of 265,896 square miles the entire United Kingdom (which aggregates only 94,284 square miles) and still be almost twice as large as England, Scotland and Ireland.

Texas is also larger than France (207,054 square miles) and Belgium 11,752 square miles).

In the year 1821 the American pioneer Moses Austin accepted the invitation of the government of Texas to settle in Texas.

The Mexican government was anxious to have American settlers, "in order to restrain these savages (the Indians) and bring them into subjection."

The American ideal of a representative, constitutional form of government had extended through Latin America and on May 7, 1824, Mexico adopted an organic law, designating Texas as a province "until Texas possessed the necessary elements to form a separate state of herself."

FIGHT FOR FREEDOM

In 1834 the then president of Mexico, the brilliant Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Ana, assumed dictatorship and in May, 1834, dissolved the Mexican constitutional congress, depriving Texas, among others, of "a right to representation in the government."

That led to a struggle for liberty in Texas almost parallel to the struggle that had led to the war for American independence and to the founding of the United States.

On March 20, 1836, the delegates of the people of Texas met in general convention in the town of Washington, Texas, and adopted a declaration of independence which followed the text of the American Declaration of Independence of 1776.

With a few exceptions the signers of the Texas declaration of independence were Americans. They elected as their president, Richard Ellis.

The constitution of the Republic of Texas, adopted March 17, 1836, followed the text of the constitution of the United States.

Gen. Santa Ana decided to stamp out entirely that movement for liberty. He took the field himself and invaded Texas.

ORDERS MASSACRE

During the seven weeks, from the second day of March, 1836, to the twenty-second day of April, 1836, there was re-enacted in Texas the equivalent of the drama of the American Revolution.

Gen. Sam Houston—a fervent admirer of George Washington—became the Washington of Texas.

Disregarding the articles of surrender signed by the Mexican officials and by Col. Fannin and Maj. Wallace for the Texans, which provided that the Alamo garrison were to be treated as prisoners of war, the officers released on parole and that the "men should receive every comfort and be fed," they were massacred on March 27, 1836.

But Gen. Sam Houston and his handful of men saved the Texas Republic.

At the battle of San Jacinto, on April 21, 1836, they completely defeated the Mexican army and took Gen. Santa Ana, the president of Mexico, prisoner.

The victory at San Jacinto secured the independence of Texas. It was like the American victory at Yorktown of October, 1781. It determined the struggle in favor of the new nation.

INVITED INTO UNION

Just as the United States founded a new capital and named it Washington, in honor of Gen. George Washington, Texas founded a new capital and named it Houston, in honor of Gen. Sam Houston, who was elected president of the Republic of Texas.

On May 1, 1837, the United States Senate adopted a resolution whereby the United States recognized the independence of Texas.

The people of Texas were eager for the admission of Texas as a state of the United States. Opposition having developed, the matter of admission was made an issue in the presidential campaign of 1844.

J. K. Polk, who stood on a platform of admission of Texas in the Union, was elected.

The people of the United States having signified their desire to have Texas in the Union, the United States Senate passed the resolution inviting Texas to become a member of the Union, and President John Tyler signed it on March 1, 1845.

On October 13, 1845, the Congress of Texas approved the ordinance of acceptance of statehood and the Constitution to go into effect when Texas became a state. On December 29, 1845, President Polk approved the joint resolution of Congress admitting Texas in the Union.

Besides adding 389,166 square miles of territory, the annexation of Texas extended the territory of the United States to the Rio Grande, and doubled the American seaboard on the Gulf of Mexico.

The trade of Texas, which was estimated at $1,400,000 for the year 1834, for the entire territory has grown to the stupendous sum of about $5,000,000,000 for the year 1934, for the state of Texas alone, and the population, which was 36,300 in 1834 (including 15,300 Indians) has passed the 6,000,000 mark for Texas alone!

She plans to spend several months reviewing the plays on the London stage, where she first leaped from obscurity to stardom, hoping to find a vehicle in which she can appear on Broadway this fall.

Miss Bankhead left behind the portrait of herself by Augustus John, famous British artist, which is to be placed on exhibition in a number of art galleries here. The first will be in Pittsburgh.

PIRATES OPEN LONG SERIES WITH WHITE SOX TODAY

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Benswanger Beats Scouts. Finds and Buys Blanton. Time Changes Bike Races. ♦ Clark May Quit Baseball. Bookies Put on Spot. Friedman Not to Play.

William E. Benswanger, Pirate president, is such a born go-getter that he even beats his own scouts to desirable ball players. If Pitcher Cy Blanton makes good, and, like Nick Etten who has been farmed to Little Rock to become a first baseman, he is considered certain to do so later, if not this spring, 100 per cent of the credit for the discovery and acquisition of the young hurler will belong to the chief executive of the Pittsburgh club. For it was President Benswanger and nobody else who dug up Blanton and brought him into the Pirate fold.

W. E. Benswanger

Quietly watching the St. Joseph star while the latter was mowing down the Western League batters last season, and sensing that he was a comer of rare promise, the Buccaneer prexy stepped in and bought the pitcher before the youngster had been even scouted. Nothing about Blanton was known to Manager Gibson, Bill Hinchman or Carlton Molesworth, and it was not until the purchase had been completed that Molesworth scouted the youthful flinger. Blanton already has confirmed President Benswanger's judgment. The right-hander has a real assortment of curves, a fine fast ball and an effective and controllable screwball. Furthermore he knows what it's all about and understands pitching. It's only a question of time until he becomes a front-rank pitcher, and it was due entirely to President Benswanger's fine judgment and fast action that the Bucs landed the prize.

FIRST SIX-DAY RACES HERE RECALLED

A stretch of almost 40 years between six-day bike races in Pittsburgh brought vast changes. Veteran local fans, while watching the grind at Duquesne Garden last week under modern conditions, saw a complete makeover as they recalled the first six-day tussles here among famous wheelmen back in the '90's, in the days of the Exposition Building and Cyclorama Hall, when the endurance grinds were promoted by the old Cathedral Band and other organizations. Stars of that era, like Dutch Waller, Louis Gimm, Albert Shock and others, who featured the early Pittsburgh races, are now only dim memories. Tracks, bikes, systems and all other angles are different.

There was no team racing or relief riding in those days. It was every man for himself, a severe test of endurance as well as of speed and track generalship. Each rider had to get along with as little sleep and rest as was possible, as every hour off the track meant a loss of mileage, so the bikers took nourishment on the fly and often kept pedaling while resting their heads on pillows placed on the handlebars. Many continued riding to the point of complete exhaustion and collapse, and the singles races, which got their start in New York in 1891, on old-style high wheels, were so widely condemned as involving a dangerous strain that they were abandoned after 1898, and the two-man rule went into effect in the international race at New York in 1899, the first winning team being that of Miller and Waller. Miller gained such fame by winning the final singles race in New York that he was booked for a vaudeville tour, and made a Pittsburgh appearance at the old Avenue Theater in a pedaling exhibition on a home trainer.

AILING ARM MAY FORCE CLARK TO QUIT

Reports from the South have it that Pitcher Bill Clark, of the Giants, is just about ready to quit baseball. Despite the confidence recently expressed by Manager Bill Terry that the southpaw had recovered from his arm trouble of last year and would be of much help to the New York club during 1934, Clark himself is said to have told intimates that he fears he is done. The former Brooklyn flinger, who dropped from 20 wins in 1932 to only five last season, admits that he can't throw a lick and has almost abandoned hope of regaining winning form.

Bill Clark

And Clark adds that if he finds he can't get going he won't try to hang on with the Giants. Nor will he consent to be sent to the minors. He'll quit the game altogether, he says, and go back to Mississippi to look for some other kind of job. In voicing his objections to going to the minors, Clark, a close friend of Glenn Wright, makes it known that the former Pirate shortstop received two offers to remain in the major leagues after Brooklyn released him a couple of months ago, but passed them up because he could get more money from the Kansas City club. Bill thinks Glenn made a mistake and says he should have remained in the big show even at a temporary financial sacrifice.

RACE BETTORS CAN SUE FOR LOST MONEY

The return of open betting at New York race tracks, if the Crawford-Breitenbach bill is passed this week, will be made under unusual conditions that will put the bookie on the well-known spot unless his customers are what he terms good sports and willing to forget what they could do under the law. For if a horse player loses a bet he can sue the bookie and recover his losses. Reduced to its simplest form, the bill provides that if a person places a bet with a bookie and loses, he can go into court and recover the lost bet in a civil action without alleging fraud or offering any other ground except that he wants his money back.

The idea is that, to accomplish the short cut by which the State Constitution can be circumvented, the Legislature has to fix some sort of penalty for bookmaking. Accordingly, it proposes to make the penalty a civil instead of a criminal one. Of course, the man who makes a $2 bet is not likely to hire a $100 lawyer, spend $20 in court costs and otherwise inconvenience himself to get back his $2 if his horse goes the wrong way, but the man who makes a heavy bet will be a continual threat to the bookie. It is expected that under the conditions there will be fewer wagers.

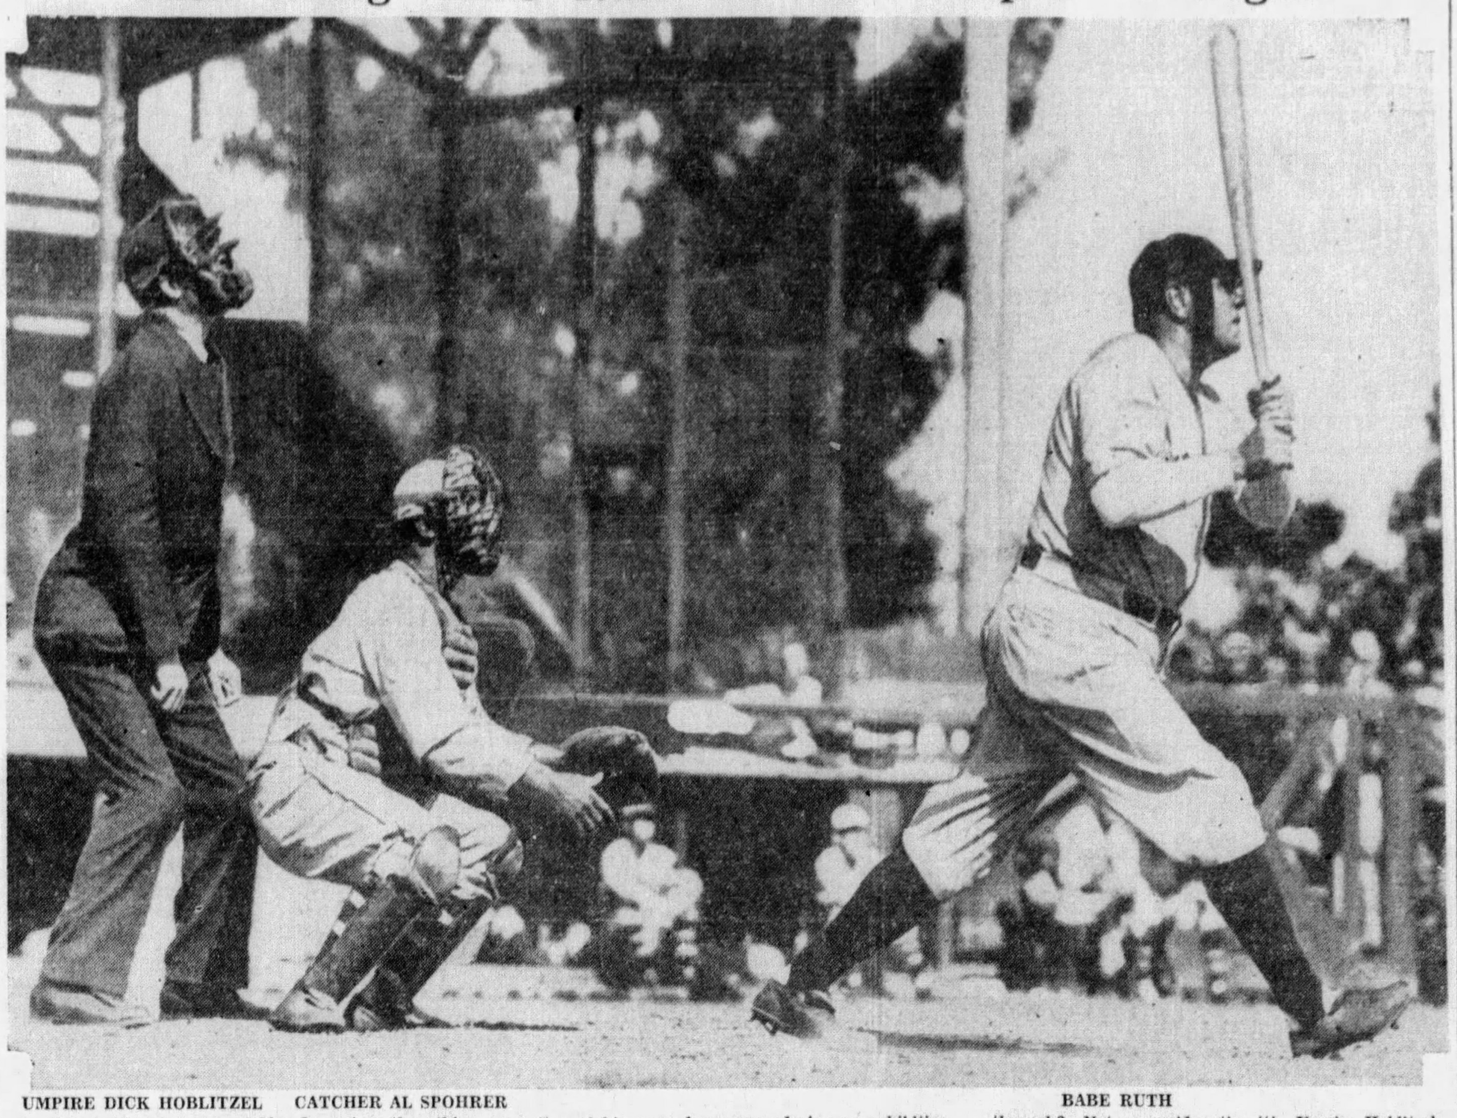
NO MORE PRO FOOTBALL FOR FRIEDMAN

Benny Friedman spikes the report that he would continue to play professional football next season notwithstanding his new duties in New York as head coach at City College. Benny says the pro gridiron will see him no more as a player. It's too much of a grind and the responsibility is too great. No more baked-apple breakfasts and 9 o'clock dinners for him on Sundays, he says. If he is connected with any National League team next fall it will be only as a coach, or as an official of a club.

Benny Friedman

Former co-workers will meet as rivals when Friedman's City College eleven plays New York U., for Mal Stevens, the new Violet coach, was Benny's boss when Mal was head man at Yale. Friedman lasted only one season as assistant coach at New Haven, for while it is asserted he was the first to recognize the merits of Bob Lassiter, Dud Parker and Clem Williamson and brought those players to the front, Benny and his Michigan-taught football did not mix with Yale. The Violet game is certain to be one of Friedman's big objectives next season.

'Then Along Came Ruth'—A New Chapter Is Begun



UMPIRE DICK HOBLITZEL CATCHER AL SPOHRER BABE RUTH

No classic canvas ever told a finer story than this work of the photographer's lens. It shows the king of sluggers, the one and only Babe Ruth, driving out another of his many home runs during an exhibition game between the New York Yankees and the Boston Braves at St. Petersburg, Fla. Is the Old Man through? Not so you'd notice it! Umpire Hoblitzel is a former big league star, a first baseman. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

SCHOOL CHAMPS PLAN PARADE WEDNESDAY

By JULIUS LEVIN

Business men and students will band together Wednesday afternoon to pay tribute to the members of the South High School basketball team, which won the state championship in the Pitt Stadium pavilion Saturday night by defeating Reading High School 42-17, in the final game of the P. I. A. A. elimination.

Prof. J. M. McLaughlin, principal of South, today announced that permission has been granted by the board of education and the Public Safety Department to permit the students to parade from the high school to the downtown district Wednesday afternoon.

The procession will be headed by the members of the team, the faculty and members of the Business Men's Association. Music will be furnished by the uniformed South High School band.

ASSEMBLY CARDED

The students will pay tribute to their basketball team at a special assembly in the school auditorium prior to the forming of the procession.

A committee of South Side business men has been chosen to arrange plans for a testimonial to be held in the high school on Thursday evening, April 19 when the members of the team will be presented suitable gifts. This committee is composed of Ben Friedland, John Grau, William Finkel, Gustave Wilde, Paul Bleichner and Fred J. Breitweiser.

Local basketball fans who saw the Orioles, led by the incomparable Eddie Spotovich, rally in the second half to outdistance the Red Knights, are hailing the South Siders one of the greatest floor machines ever molded in Western Pennsylvania. That scoring spree put on by Spotovich in the third period when he counted five successive field goals will go down in local scholastic annals as one of the finest individual scoring drives ever witnessed in the Pitt Stadium.

ALL PLAYERS THROUGH

The triumph of the City Leaguers not only climaxed the most remarkable season ever compiled by a local school quintet but also marked the last appearance of the Orioles as a team, every member of the starting lineup having completed his scholastic athletic career in the championship game.

While Spotovich emerged from the contest the individual hero as a result of scoring 23 out of the 42 points made by South, the sparkling exhibitions put up by his supporting cast should not be overlooked. Eddie Czlapinski and Charley Miskevics, the guards, never played a better defensive game than that which they showed against Reading. This duo combined to stifle the Reading attack in the last half of the game, when the Red Knights were held to 5 points, while South was ringing up 30. Miskevics added to his worth by grabbing the ball off the Reading bankboard to prevent possible scores.

Joe Galiszewski and Eddie Milkovich also contributed their share by flashing some excellent floor work to advance the ball within scoring distance. All four contributed passes that enabled Spotty to shoot with deadly accuracy.

Having conquered everything that stood between them and the scholastic basketball throne, the Orioles now will rest on their laurels.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., April 2.—The Pirates and White Sox came to this California town today for a game that will mark the beginning of the long eastward trek for both clubs. San Bernardino, the first stop on the 12-game barnstorming tour, is situated about 60 miles east of Los Angeles.

Hal Smith, lanky right-hander, who has not been doing so well by the Pirates, will make an attempt to stop the American Leaguers in today's scrap. Gibson is disappointed over the showing of the right-hander to date, but the boss has not quit on Smith; in fact, he will let him go just as far as he can in his joust with the Fonseca clan.

GRACE'S BLOW WINS

Gibby's well-conditioned athletes said a merry farewell to Los Angeles yesterday afternoon. The gladness was occasioned when Earl Grace, hard-hitting Bucco catcher, drove a homer into the centerfield bleachers to give the Pittsburghers a 9 to 8 victory over the Cubs in a thrilling 10-inning struggle at Wrigley Field. The Buccaneer triumph made the long series an even proposition, each club winning four games.

Grace brought the only extra-inning fight of the set to a noisy close. Earl was the first batter to face Guy Bush, his former teammate in the tenth.

Earl gave the ball both barrels and it soared high and dry over Tut Stainback's head into the seating section. About 4,000 fans saw the spectacle.

The home-run fever overtook little Lloyd Waner, and it remained with Arky Vaughan, who smacked one into the seats in the third to ring up his seventh four-sacker of the training season. Little Lloyd found the range on the seats in the fourth.

Mrs. Hitchcock's Death Is Blow To Sport World

By BILL CORUM
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, April 2.—It would not be fitting that Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Sr., should die without mention of the fact on the sports pages. She was the first sportswoman of America. She was more, of course, and her charities and church work were famous on Long Island and in the Carolinas and Virginia. But primarily she loved horses and sport.

That her death should come, at the age of 69, as the result of a fall sustained while leading a drag hunt the day after last Christmas, was natural; perhaps inevitable. She always was one to make light of the accidents of the hunting field, and on a horse the word caution was not in her lexicon.

They say of her that to her last gallop on the "little drag"—two and one-half miles—through the famed Hitchcock woods at Aiken, S. C., it was not a question of younger riders pulling up to this matriarch of the hunt, but of keeping up with her. At 68 she could still outride all but a scant handful of our horsewomen and, of course, many horsemen, too.

Often called "The Mother of American Polo," Mrs. Hitchcock and her husband started their sons, Tommy and Francis, to playing the game as soon as they were old enough to swing a mallet. And I have been told that in those days it was no uncommon sight to see the Hitchcocks playing as a team in Aiken or Westbury, L. I., with possibly one or more of the daughters also taking part.

Thus all the family was born and raised to the saddle and what an apt pupil Tommy was at polo is best indicated by the fact that he became this country's foremost internationalist. And so far as I know, still is. A daring horseman, he was equally daring as an aviator with the romantic and picturesque Lafayette Escadrille in the World War.

HEIDELBERG WINS WESTERN AMATEUR SOCCER CUP TITLE

CHICAGO TEAM EASY VICTIM OF LOCALS

By TOM BIRKS

The Heidelberg Soccer Club, for the fourth time in 10 years, will represent the West in the national amateur cup final. The local eleven won the right to meet the winner of the eastern title by defeating the Chicago Sloboda aggregation, 3-0, in easy fashion at Greenlee Field yesterday afternoon.

After losing in the final to the New Bedford Defenders in 1926, the locals went on to win the title in 1927, and repeated in 1929, defeating the German-Americans, of Newark, N. J., 9 to 0, at Newark. This is the largest score ever turned in in a national final. Duke Stenzel, the present outside left, and Capt. Johnny McCosky, the inside left, are the only two players of the present team who played in 1927 and 1929.

A large crowd watched a disappointing game yesterday. Sloboda, with a three-year undefeated record in the Illinois International League, came here with a great reputation, but could not make the local boys break a sweat. Heidelberg played disjointedly; in fact, looked nothing like the club that beat Moon Run the week previous.

STENZEL SCORES FIRST

Stenzel scored the first goal for Heidelberg after 22 minutes of action, and from then until the end of the game it was a battle between Heidelberg and Pennycook, the Sloboda goalie. The Green and Gold forwards watched chance after chance go a begging.

In the second half, Stan Urbanic tallied the goal and Steve Kuten accounted for the third on penalty kick. During this time the Heidelberg halfbacks, together with M. Kuten and Bobish, held the Chicago forwards in check. Ramous, the Heidelberg goalie, had only two shots to stop during the entire game.

The final will be played April 15, according to John J. McEwan, of Cleveland, the chairman of the committee. The eastern winner has not as yet been decided.

The Nathan Soccer Club won the Panhandle League title yesterday afternoon, defeating Manown, 2 to 1, in well-played game.

Curry, the West Penn senior champion, meets Avella in an exhibition game at Avella this afternoon. This game is part of a miners' celebration. The kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock. The lineups:

STIX TEAM WINS

Jean Bauer Victor In Augusta Event

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 2.—(AP.)—Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., played a mixture of erratic and sensational golf to win the Augusta woman's invitation golf tournament from Marian Miley, of Lexington, Ky., yesterday.

The 21-year-old golfer had to play her best to defeat Miss Miley, the medalist. Miss Bauer took the lead early in the match, but long drives and accurate putting enabled Miss Miley to even the match twice and to keep in the running all the way.

FRANK BARTELL AND HIS WIFE AT END OF BIKE GRIND

Bartell and his partner, Piet Van Kempen, the world champion six-day bicycle racing champions, finished second to Torchy Peden and Jules Audy in the race completed in Duuesne Garden early Sunday morning. Here we see Frank and his wife shortly after Peden and Jules Audy in the race completed in Duquesne Garden the race ended. Note the look of fatigue on his face. He's in another race this week. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Six-day bicycle racing won itself a home in Pittsburgh last week, due to the elaborate presentation of the international competition at Duquesne Garden by Joe Tobin, Charley Wolfe and Willie Spencer . . . Coming in Holy Week and entirely a novelty here, there were many who predicted failure for the venture, and, indeed, it seemed as if they might be correct during the early days of the race, but the affair went on to artistic and financial success with the large crowds and interesting racing of the last three nights . . . The riders gave the fans a good show throughout, so much so that the sponsors could put on another race next week and make it click.

The racers will be back for another whirl in the fall, and the chances are we will have at least one, if not two, of the promotions a year from now on . . . The sport proved thrilling and fascinating and the fans ate it up . . . A bow in the direction of the men responsible for the enterprise . . . They proved themselves good promoters in every sense of the word, and don't be surprised if they go in for fight promotions and other sports features . . . Class stuck out all over their bike race and they established themselves within a week as a welcome addition to the local field of entrepreneurs by their policy of sparing no expense to give the customers a run for their money and send them away satisfied with "a good show."

The victory of Torchy Peden and Jules Audy in the grind was a popular one . . . Throughout the week this pair was a favorite team with the spectators, and when they came on in the closing hours to sprint to victory a happy climax was attained.

The action of the National Rules Committee of Football to reduce the size of the ball for next fall to facilitate its handling, especially for forward passing, seems a sensible move . . . Anything that will help the players to become more expert is a step in the right direction . . . Nine local players so far have entered the national ping-pong, or table tennis, tournament to be held in Cleveland next Friday, Saturday and Sunday . . . Time was when it took a good punch on the chin to floor Max Schmeling, but now he falls down in training and has to postpone a bout with Paulino Uzcudun . . . Can it be that he stumbled over pronouncing Paulino's last name? . . . Some young fellows heed Horace Greeley's advice and go west seeking their fortune, while others go to South High School and win the state basketball title.—HARRY KECK.

Ohio Team Second In A.B.C. Tourney

PEORIA, Ill., April 2.—(INS.)—Just nine pins short of the leaders, the A. J. Held team, of Columbus, O., were holding down second place today in the American Bowling Congress tournament with a total of 3,023. It was the same team that finished second in the A. B. C. at Columbus last year.

The Pabst team, of Chicago, eased into fifth place in the five-men event with 2,986 series. The Idle Hour Recreation, Chicago, cracked 2,931 pins for ninth place.

Racer Hits Tree; Driver Is Killed

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 2.—(AP.)—W. G. (Bo) Folk, of Charleston, S. C., was killed as his racing automobile crashed into a tree while he was warming up the motor for a 100-mile road race at Camp Foster, near here, yesterday.

Witnesses said Folk, about 26 years old, was traveling at high speed when a midget automobile ran onto the course before him. Swerving to avoid hitting the car, Folk drove his racing machine off the road and directly into the tree. He died in an automobile en route to a hospital.

COOPER LEADS IN CAVALIER GOLF TOURNEY

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., April 2.—(AP.)—Harry Cooper, the veteran "Lighthorse Harry" from Chicago, was riding light and fast today at the top in the cavalier open golf tournament. He had a 36-hole total of 135.

The slender professional made only one error as he covered this difficult ocean side layout in 32-32—64 yesterday, four under par and two shots better than the figure set a year ago by Tony Manero.

Cooper's fine round gave him a two-stroke lead over Paul Runyan and three over Ky Laffoon. Runyan, who won this tournament a year ago, turned in a card identical with par on every hole, while Laffoon with several three-putt greens was one above par at 69.

Bill Mehlhorn with a 69 to go with his first round 73, and Bobby Cruickshank, who had another 71, were together at 142.

LOCALS PLAY TODAY

PINEHURST, N. C., April 2.—(AP.)—First-round match play in the North and South amateur golf tournament gets under way here today with George T. Dunlap, Jr., of Garden City, L. I., favored to take this third title in this event.

The national champion demonstrated he was at the peak of his game with a sizzling 67 which gave him medal honors by a seven-stroke margin in the 18-hole qualifying round. Earlier in the week, he had finished second in the North and South open.

In other matches today, T. S. Jamison, Jr., of Greensburg, Pa., meets Bayard Mitchell, of Pine Valley, N. J., and T. B. Thorsen, Chicago faces H. J. Blue, of Pittsburgh.

Ross vs. Mancini Title Battle Off

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 2.—(INS.)—Freddie Miller, of Cincinnati, will battle Paul Dazzo, of Chicago, for the world featherweight championship now held by the Ohioan here on Derby Eve., May 4.

The bout was assured today when the Kentucky Athletic Board of Control gave formal approval. The match will be 15 rounds to a decision.

Baseball Briefs

ORLANDO, Fla.—(INS.)—The Brooklyn Dodgers were to play the Philadelphia Athletics here again today and the good townsfolk were all set for another afternoon of laughs. The two teams put on an exhibition game yesterday that was a comical example of how the national game ought not to be played. Both clubs made frequent miscues and, all in all, performed in the manner of semi-pros. Oh, yes, the Mackmen won, 5 to 4.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — (INS.)—The Yankees were on their way north today and the sole topic of conversation among the boyse was the phenomenal spring hitting of the ancient Babe Ruth, the guy who takes an infinite delight in confounding the experts—baseball and health. Supposedly all through the Babe hung up a grand average of .429 in the spring games concluded at St. Petersburg yesterday.

BATON ROUGE, La.—(INS.)—The New York Giants and the Cleveland Indians start their trek northward with the third game of their 14-game series here today. Each now holds one decision. The Giants flashed their best ball of the spring at New Orleans yesterday to win by a 2-to-0 score. The Terrymen made a brilliant triple play in the seventh inning.

TAMPA, Fla.—Stanley Bach, outfielder from the University of Kentucky, who has been hitting the ball hard for the Cincinnati Reds in spring practice, today is on his way to join the Red reserves. He will replace Harry Rice, who was released unconditionally to Toronto yesterday.

SARASOTA, Fla.—(INS.)—With only three days left of spring training at their southern camp, the Phillies have demonstrated one thing—they can't hit in the pinches. Yesterday for the third consecutive day they dropped a ball game because they couldn't get a hit when a hit meant runs. They lost to Boston by the score of 6-1.

BILOXI, Miss.—(INS.)—The American League Champion Washington Senators dropped a 2-to-0 game to the New Orleans Pelicans yesterday. Pelican Pitchers Milnar and Bryant held the Senators to three scattered hits, while their teammates garnered five hits from the pitching of Whitehill, Weaver and Crowder.

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP.)—Harley Boss, regular first baseman of the Cleveland Indians, has been sent back to Cleveland for treatment for a sinus condition which has prevented him from getting into condition. Hal Trosky appears certain of the starting position at first. Louis (Boze) Berger has been farmed out to the New Orleans Pelicans with the understanding he will play second regularly. Outfielder Julian Johnson and Pitchers John Lucas and Woodrow Wilson Davis will train with the Pelicans and then join the Zanesville (O.) club of the Mid-Atlantic League.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — (AP.) — Billy Sullivan, Jr., first baseman for the Milwaukee Brewers and son of the famous White Sox catcher of two decades ago, poled out four home runs to lead his team to a 15-14 victory over the St. Paul Saints in an exhibition game here yesterday. The game between the two American Association teams went 10 innings.

Walter Megaw, of Washington, and John Waters, of Hartford, Conn., took first place in the doubles of the National Bowling Congress tourney at Baltimore last night with a score of 789.

Elmer Daily's efforts to organize a new six-team Class D baseball league in Southwestern Pennsylvania has surmounted another barrier with the announcement by trustees of W. & J. College that the Washington (Pa.) entry may have use of College Field there this summer.

Pari-mutuel wagering for the Florida racing season, recently closed, set a new record high of $27,549,749, an increase of $8,446,071 over the total for the previous season.

Seeded players in the twelfth annual Western indoor tennis championships went into the second round of play today with William Parkhill, defending champion, paired against Joe Zukas, of Chicago.

Chuck Gardiner, Chicago goalie, received a bad cut over the right eye as the Hawks defeated the Montreal Maroons, 3-2, at Chicago last night and qualified to meet Detroit in the final series for hockey's prized Stanley Cup.

Ellsworth Vines defeated Bill Tilden, 8-10, 6-3, 11-9; Keith Gledhill defeated Vincent Richards, 6-8, 6-2, 8-2, and Vines and Gledhill defeated Tilden and Richards, 6-2, 9-7, in professional tennis matches at Buffalo last night.

BUCS, CHISOX OPEN SERIES

Cubs rolled up six tallies in this inning and jumped out in front with a four-run advantage, but the Pirates kept pounding away and tied up the contest in the seventh.

Cy Blanton was the winning pitcher of the afternoon. The former Western League star relieved Heine Meine at the start of the fourth and Cy was still flinging them when the contest ended. Emmett Nelson opened on the mound for the Cubs.

CHILLYSAUCE

Arky Vaughan gave his Fullerton friends a warm topic for discussion in the Pirate battles at Wrigley Field. Five of Arky's seven springtime round-trippers were smacked over the right field fence at the Los Angeles park. Vaughan is not a distinctive "pull" hitter, for he slashes many a hit to left and center, but when he connects on his power side, he has the punch to drive the rocket over almost any right field fence.

Babe Phelps, young Hercules of the mask and big glove, who graduated to the Cubs from Albany, was stricken with an internal complaint and rushed to a Los Angeles hospital. Rookies are prone to eat a lot of queer things in training, and Phelps apparently followed suit, but he was discharged shortly. What the youngster had eaten was a puzzle, but Trainer Andy Lotshaw remarked the lad had never tried an oyster cocktail, and having ordered one he ate the shells and all.

Bill Jurges may set the pace in a fielding way for National League shortstops this year. The rangy boy picked up by the Bruins during the Hornsby regime has developed into a ball hawk reminiscent of Chuck Hollocher. Grimm's short-fielder is one of the scrappy players of the league. Like Mickey Doolin and other fire-eaters, his uniform is always smeared with grime and mud. He made a one-hand stop of a screamer to rob Woodie Jensen yesterday.

Manager Lefty Grimm thinks a lot of his Italian understudy, Dolf Camilli. The former Coast League star has a lot of power at the plate, as he demonstrated when he smacked the ball over the back wall of right field. Camilli is a reminder of Grimm in his left-hand antics. He also has a powerful arm, like Lefty, but he hasn't learned to snap his throws underhand after the Grimm fashion.

Grimm, by the way, is not going around with solemn mein because he is the manager of the Cubs. Grimm did a lot of cutting up yesterday and the fans enjoyed his comedy. He said:

"This managerial stuff is not going to keep me from feeling good and being myself."

Vamarie Leads In Yacht Race

HAVANA, April 2.—(INS.)—Handicapped by an unseasonable calm, which destroyed all chances of a new record being established, 15 sturdy sailing vessels early today were making their way steadily to Havana harbor in the fifth international St. Petersburg-Havana yacht classic.

Leading the fleet, according to radio dispatches received here from the Coast Guard cutter Tuscarora is Vadim Makaroff's Vamarie of Oyster Bay, L. I. About eight miles behind the Vamarie is the Azara. Others fairly close to the two leaders are the Lanakai, owned and skippered by Dr. A. C. Howe, of Brooklyn; the White Cloud, and the Little Dipper.

Cochrane Case 'Not Appendicitis'

LAKELAND, Fla., April 2.—(AP.)—Dr. Grover C. Freeman, who last night diagnosed a pain in Mickey Cochrane's right side as "low-grade appendicitis," today said further examination convinced him the Detroit American League's manager was not suffering from his appendix.

The doctor said Cochrane would be kept under observation at the hospital for two or three days.

The ball player was admitted to the hospital yesterday after visiting Clearwater, where he attended an exhibition baseball game.

The catcher-manager's side still was causing him some pain this morning, but the trouble remained "obscure," the physician said.

Jim Farley Recalls Happy Days as Boxing Chief

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—The Postmaster General of the United States, James A. Farley, is just a trifle homesick for the whimsies, the multi sided ramifications of the prize fight business.

Thirteen months ago today he resigned his post as chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, one of the most powerful of boxing' ruling bodies, to take his place in the cabinet of President Roosevelt.

Today, as he leaned back at his desk at the National Democratic Headquarters, locked his fingers behind his head, and looked back through the first year of the New Deal, into the days when Tunney and Dempsey and Rickard were kings and he ruled them all, he said:

"I wouldn't have missed it for anything. We had a lot of fun and a lot of laughs. Boxing was a tremendous game then, jammed with color and great personalities. It will come back, eventually, as everything will come back. Today's slump in boxing will be eliminated when the slump in all business has been eliminated. What boxing needs most of all right now is a colorful heavyweight champion, a fellow like Dempsey. The game may have found him in Max Baer."

HIS FAMOUS 'BRIDGE'

Farley reads the sport pages avidly, keeps in touch with all the sport writers who used to cross-examine him at the Commission until he finally would seek safety in an expression Washington reporters now know well:

"We'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

They tell one story of Farley and his interest in boxing that completes the picture perfectly. It was the night Roosevelt's nomination seemed to hang in the balance at Chicago. The convention hall was in an uproar. In the press benches writers pounded their typewriters frantically, some of the top men just arrived from the Sharkey-Schmeling fight and its disputed decision in New York.

CONVENTION SCENE

Into the hall strode Farley, the President-maker, and the uproar died. Perspiring, worried looking, he shouldered his way toward the press seats. The writers waited breathlessly. The whisper raced around:

"Here's Farley. Something big's happened."

He finally reached the side of Damon Runyon, doubling in brass. He leaned down, whispered hoarsely:

"Tell me, Damon. Did Sharkey really win that fight?"

THREATS FAIL TO DISTURB MARKET

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The stock market closed last week with the averages practically unchanged. The ground lost on Tuesday's setback was all regained. Thus the market, after all the tumult of the past three weeks, has held its own within a fraction, and the more comprehensive averages are within a couple of points of where they were at the beginning of March.

Why have prices not broken? There have been serious labor crises. A bill has been pending which threatens to destroy speculative markets and to subject business corporations to unheard of restrictions. An "NRA" enforcement drive is threatened attended by increasing labor costs and artificial price fixing. Yet the stock market holds.

One outstanding fact is that despite such threats and much Wall street pessimism there has been no great panic or collapse—no general liquidation. The President is fishing and various business magnates are flitting off for European holidays.

I think the answer is twofold. First, the reassurance that political institutions and legal processes are not going to be revolutionized. Second, the realization that we are being inevitably driven toward higher prices and that this trend has been only delayed by the various uncertainties of government regulation.

'BRAIN TRUST' MISSING

The Dr. Wirt episode has helped to clear the air of hidden suspicions, and independence of Congress has been demonstrated. We obviously are not under a dictatorship, and the "brain trust" is hard to find.

In the background is that 59-cent dollar. Measured in gold, stock prices are not much above bottom; but actually prices are quoted in paper dollars, and these have not yet depreciated as much as they are practically certain to do.

Other things being equal, a stock that was worth 20 a year ago is now theoretically worth about 34. That would be merely in the basis of the devaluation of the dollar.

But, actually, earnings per share are mostly larger, and the general outlook for volume and commodity prices is such that earnings approximating those of 1931 would be a reasonable expectation. That should mean still higher prices for stocks, and doubtless would do so were it not for the NRA policies and the general tendency of the administration to curtail profits.

TREND UPWARD

The net result of this line of thought is to bring us to the same old conclusion, namely, that stocks which are relatively little affected by high labor and materials still have plenty of room to rise.

Another outstanding fact continues to be the upward trend of the most active stocks. An index made by adding the net movement of the 20 stocks which are most active each day, made new highs on Friday and Saturday. There the most active operations are on the bull side.

Another point to note is that the January 15 level has held, and that this was about the level attained during the substantial part of the pre-inflation rise last June. It looks like a logical resistance level. Note how American Can has held at 94, Steel at 49-50 and DuPont at 93, as their January "gaps" were closed.

What the next moves of the new dealers may be is, of course, uncertain, but some of the immediate difficulties have been overcome and certain problems temporarily solved. Why not now, at least, a little of the "spring rise" which was nipped and delayed by labor threats and the drastic stock exchange bill? Really, one of the most serious threats to our sound development concerns the currency. But there are a good many stocks which would not be affected bearishly by any sort of inflation.

Paint in Two-Compartment Cans

EVERETT SINGHOSE LABELLING PAINT 'PUT UP' IN TWO-COMPARTMENT CONTAINERS

USES NEW PAINT CONTAINER

New uses for products, new demands for materials, and new materials to use in the paint business have brought new packages. The development of aluminum paint for its wide variety of uses from priming the wood on frame buildings to insure against blistering and peeling in final coats of paint, to the painting of bridges using thousands of gallons of aluminum paint, has brought a demand for different type packages than those formerly used.

The facts that the flake aluminum powder used in aluminum paint is affected by the oil used as the binder, and that ready mixed aluminum paint loses its brilliance and leafing power and its silvery sheen if it stands for a long time, has led to the development of the double compartment package for aluminum paint.

Modern methods of merchandising, better displays in stores, better arrangements of merchants' stock have helped in the improvement of appearance of packages, and nowhere has this been more evidenced than in the labels used on paint cans.

Thompson & Co., of Oakmont, developed several years ago—ALUMBRITE—an aluminum paint in a double compartment package, beautifully labeled and in its appearance duplicating the high quality of the product. The convenient packages and attractive appearance, as well as the superior quality of the contents have been largely responsible for the wide popularity of this material over the eastern half of the United States.

SECURITIES ACT CHANGE SEEN

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A limited revision of the Securities Act during this session of Congress was assured when Chairman Rayburn, of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, definitely stated that he would inaugurate a move for certain "minor amendments." He declined to outline his views on alterations in the act, stating that he will make no formal announcement until his proposals are definitely ready for congressional consideration. He was emphatic, however, in declaring there would be no changes in the fundamentals of the measure.

Coincident with Rayburn's statement word came from the Senate that there is sentiment there for some revisions of liability provisions of the Securities Act.

BUREAU SEES BUSINESS GAIN

General business in the United States continued to improve through February and the first half of March, the Pittsburgh Business Review, published by the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Pittsburgh, says in its current issue.

Most of the major industries of the country increased operating schedules at an accelerated rate in February and early March, and the volume of retail trade showed impressive gains even after allowance is made for higher prices.

Freight carloadings in recent weeks have been running far above those in the same weeks last year and slightly above those in early March, 1932. Comparisons with February and March of last year undoubtedly overrate the improvement because of the very low level of business in those two months a year ago. The greater proportion of the gains, however, have been decidedly larger than seasonal.

BELOW PEAK

Even though the current level of business is considerably below the peak reached in the summer, the improvement in the past two months is the first sustained rise since last July.

Improvement in general business during the past two months has resulted largely from the exceptionally rapid expansion in the automobile industry and in the iron and steel industry. With the increasing production of automobiles and steel products, other industries—especially those furnishing materials and parts for automobiles, such as tires, paints and plate glass—have expanded operations substantially.

COAL GAINS

Coal production has risen somewhat in the past month or six weeks, whereas a seasonal decline is to be expected at this time of year. The counter-seasonal trend in coal production is explainable by the larger domestic consumption because of the continuation of unusually cold weather and by the increased demand resulting from industrial expansion. Moreover, the recent gains in shipments of coal are suggestive of the accumulation of stocks which could be used if production were suddenly curtailed.

Auto Production Aids Plate Glass Company

Final figures for the first quarter of the year are not yet available, but the preliminary estimates indicate that earnings came up to and perhaps exceeded earlier expectations, H. S. Wherrett, president of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, said today. Because of the rate of production maintained by the motor car industry in anticipation of the public demand for spring delivery of new cars, the Ditzler Color Company, a subsidiary making lacquers for motor cars, has been operating at a high rate of production, and the Duplate plant has been running at capacity.

PENNSY SLICES TRAIN DELAYS

Pennsylvania Railroad trains in 1933 were freer from delays chargeable to equipment failures than in 1932 and the general condition of the equipment was improved, despite appreciable reductions in the expenditures for maintenance of locomotives and cars last year, it was revealed today in the annual report of the railroad's motive power department, just compiled.

Passenger trains, for example, traveled last year 14,154 miles for each delay due to a locomotive failure in contrast to 12,302 miles per engine detention in 1932.

Freight trains traveled 15,886 miles last year for each locomotive failure as compared with 14,093 miles in the previous year. The improved condition of car equipment was reflected in the fact that car failures last year caused a passenger train detention only once in every 251,854 miles in contrast to a detention once in every 208,884 miles in 1932. There were also fewer hot journals in the passenger service in 1933 than in the previous year.

Takes Poison, Man Dies in Hospital

Frank Gratehouse, 45, of 3239 Mulberry way, died in West Penn Hospital yesterday from the effects of poison he had swallowed, according to a Coroner's report. The death was reported as a suicide.

PLYMOUTH OIL HAS STRONG POSITION

"From a standpoint of earnings, the Plymouth Oil Company experienced the worst year in its history but, with all of the adversities of the past year, your company ended the year on the right side of the ledger.

"During the year the company produced 4,551,559 barrels at an average price of 59.13 cents per barrel, compared with 5,560,002 barrels produced in 1932 at an average price of 91.77 cents per barrel. Taking into consideration that production, due to proration, was 1,008,443 barrels less in 1933 than in 1932, and the price per barrel received in 1933 was 32.64 cents less than in 1932, we believe the company has made a very satisfactory showing."

COMPARES PROFIT

This situation is reflected in the comparison of earnings for the first six months of 1932 and 1933. During the first six months of 1932, the net earnings were $1,278,688, while for the first six months of 1933, the company sustained a loss of $34,560. During the last quarter and continuing through the first quarter of this year, the company has been receiving an average of 97.17 cents per barrel, which is higher than the average price of 1932.

SHOWS LOSS

By consolidating the income, profit and loss statements of Plymouth Oil Company, Big Lake Oil Company, Loring Oil Company, Republic Oil Refining Company and Reagan County Purchasing Company, Inc., the combined net earnings applicable to Plymouth Oil Company amounted to $144,634—or 14 cents per share. Before writing off the cost of non-producing and abandoned wells and leases surrendered, aggregating $360,943, the combined net earnings of Plymouth Oil Company would amount to $525,577 or 50 cents per share.

WAGE EARNERS INCREASE

NEW YORK, April 2.—More wage-earners were at work in manufacturing industry in February, 1934, than in any other month since October, 1930, and their average earnings, both weekly and hourly, were larger than in any month in the last two years, according to the results of the regular monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board. Increases in February over January, 1934, were as follows: employment, 4.7 per cent; average weekly earnings, 4.9 per cent; average hourly earnings, 1.3 per cent; and payroll disbursements, 9.7 per cent.

Average weekly earnings of all wage-earners in manufacturing industry rose from $18.89 in January to $19.81 in February, and reached a point 36 per cent above the low of $14.56 in March, 1933. Among the industries in which notable gains in average weekly earnings were recorded from January, 1934, to February were: automobile, from $22.32 to $24.40; boot and shoe, from $19.68 to $21.35; hosiery and knit goods, from $14.19 to $16.64; lumber and millwork, from $15.27 to $16.51; rubber, from $22.95 to $26.19; silk, from $14.94 to $16.86; wool, from $16.42 to $17.25; and foundries, from $15.55 to $18.05.

Automobile Sales Expand in Detroit

DETROIT, April 2.—More than three times as many automobiles were sold in Detroit during March as in the same month a year ago, according to R. L. Polk and Company. Figures for March 1 to 28 placed the Detroit total at 6,131, an increase of 1,000 cars over the preceding month.

HAWKS, WINGS CUP FINALISTS

CHICAGO, April 2.—(AP.)—The battle for the Stanley Cup, emblem of professional hockey supremacy and Canada's most highly-prized sports trophy, will be fought out between two American teams, Detroit and Chicago.

Canada's last chance of getting into the final playoff series was blasted out of existence last night when the Montreal Maroons, struggling to overcome a three-goal handicap, were conquered by Chicago's Black Hawks, 3 to 2, giving the Hawks a margin of 6 to 2 in total goals.

Detroit's Red Wings conquered the Toronto Maple Leafs to win the National League championship and qualify for the cup finals, which will be decided on a best three out of five games basis. The first two matches will be played in Detroit tomorrow and Thursday; the third in Chicago, Sunday, and the fourth, if necessary, here April 10. Should the series go the limit, the fifth match will be played in Detroit.

Progress Despite Unrest

By B. C. FORBES

TWO DEVELOPMENTS.

Announcements of wage increases, averaging 10 per cent. by the motor, steel, electrical manufacturing, and several other industries.

Mr. Forbes

Compromise settlement of the automotive strike which was threatened by the American Federation of Labor's efforts to represent workers in this "open shop" industry.

THESE ..APPENINGS were counterbalanced by the overriding of the President's veto of the bill designed to distribute large additional sums to ex-service men.

Many thoughtful citizens are already concerned over the national financial outlook. They cannot ignore the fact that federal deficits and federal borrowing are being met mainly by having banks absorb increasing millions and billions of government obligations. Conservative bankers are not desirous, to say the least, to have Congress or any other body or individual at Washington do anything calculated to swell the looming demands of the government on the investment capacity of the banks.

The market quoted value of federal obligations, it is pointed out, already is more or less artificial since the Treasury was recently authorized to support the questions for its own obligations. Anything having the effect of expanding the public debt and of aggravating the burden which will have to be faced by the taxpayer, is not welcomed by the financial world or by important corporate or individual taxpayers.

United States government maturing obligations this year alone will exceed $4,500,000,000 and a still larger total of new obligations will have to be financed.

THIS WRITER cannot but feel that the problem of recovery is sufficiently complicated and difficult to warrant the closest and most harmonious co-operation between government and governed, between Washington and industry, between lawmakers and leaders of business, between all classes.

The National City Bank of New York today aptly reminds:

"The purchasing power being disbursed by the government is artificial and necessarily temporary. To be sure, the disbursements will continue for some time, but there is doubt as to what the situation will be when they are terminated."

Some of the theoristic bureaucrats at Washington apparently don't grasp that the government cannot support everybody, but must itself be supported; that adequate employment cannot be financed indefinitely from funds furnished by taxpayers, but can result only from such rebirth of confidence as shall encourage fillers of pay envelopes as well as consumers and investors to act rationally, even courageously.

There is growing desire that Washington curtail its experimental activities as speedily as possible, that Congress get through its business with dispatch and go home, that bureaucrats and business may reach a workable understanding as soon as may be, and that, in short, America and Americans may once again be able to concentrate on their daily activities and their ambitions.

FEAR OF GRAVE labor trouble was chiefly responsible for the irregularity which characterized last week in most directions.

Both the security and the commodity markets simply backed-and-filled. Speculation reached a low ebb. Apprehension at the top was not, however, reflected throughout the whole gamut of activity—retail trade, for example, was generally described as gratifyingly brisk, exceeding the Easter volume of two years ago.

Statistical comparisons with twelve months ago are worse than worthless, they foster misleading deductions, because the closing of all banks in March naturally paralyzed normalcy.

Even so, such yardsticks as railway car loadings, power consumption, steel output, commercial failures, lumber production, construction contracts awarded, telephone connections, are encouraging.

WASHINGTON is still being watched with more or less anxiety by most employers. They regard both the securities act and the Fletcher-Rayburn stock regulation bill as seriously restrictive. Nor are they satisfied that the whole labor situation has been definitely cleared up.

THE FIRST QUARTER of 1934 has brought reasonable progress. The spring quarter should do distinctly better if Washington does not precipitate renewed uncertainty.

RUSSIA, JAPAN TRADE GROWS IN URUGUAY

Edward Tomlinson, foremost American commentator on South American economic and political conditions, has just completed a tour of South America as special correspondent of Universal Service. In a series of articles, he has written facts as he found them regarding American interests and business conditions in Brazil, the Argentine, Uruguay and Chile.

By EDWARD TOMLINSON

Noted Authority on South American Economics.

Although England and Germany are in position to extend more favorable financial arrangements, and are still the chief markets for Uruguayan products, Moscow and Tokio are concentrating efforts to capture the trade of one of the most progressive countries in South America.

Uruguay was the first country in all South America to recognize Soviet Russia and to open its doors to Russian trade and commerce.

Montevideo, with its 600,000 people, is now the headquarters for Yoiamtorg, the powerful Russian trading company—the Amtorg of South America. A Japanese chamber of commerce, with a secretary speaking perfect Spanish, makes Japan extremely important in Montevideo.

RECIPROCITY SEEN

Uruguay buys Russian oil, lumber and industrial products, and Russia in turn buys Uruguayan hides and wool under a virtual reciprocal trade agreement. Uruguayan meats, linseed and wool are destined for Japan, and in return Japan sells toys, silks, electric bulbs and cotton yarns to Uruguay.

Japanese immigrants are also to be welcomed into the country. Arrangements are progressing for the reception of 600 Japanese families to work in the Uruguayan rice fields of the north.

Japan, with its cheap labor and cheap transportation, with cargo vessels plying to South American shores, can undersell German, English and Italian yarns and other textile products, textiles from United States cotton mills, once predominant in the Uruguayan market, have practically disappeared from the shelves of Montevideo shops.

U. S. TRADE PROSPECTS

In 1933, a single Montevideo firm imported $200,000 worth of Japanese products despite exchange difficulties. This year it will buy more. Another importing firm, which for 50 years dealt exclusively in British, German and United States products, is now to represent several of the most important Japanese manufacturers.

Uruguayans use Russian gasoline in their automobiles. Russian lumber in their buildings, while the "comrades" in Russia are wearing shoes and clothing made from Uruguayan hides and wools. Both Germany and England, formerly the best customers of Uruguay, are feeling the pinch.

With these facts in mind, the United States may expect to make little headway in regaining a market in which until four years ago Uncle Sam was predominant.

About the only United States products sold in Uruguay today are harvesting machinery, trucks and tractors. Tariffs on passenger automobiles and radios are prohibitive.

(Argentina is grappling with an industrial revolution. Read about it in Mr. Tomlinson's next article.)

EASTER TRADE TOPS HOPES

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Forecasts of a record volume of business for the Easter week were apparently fulfilled in the retail trade, with the last minute shopping rush in the big stores lifting the volume above expectations.

The total business done by the stores during the past week was estimated by some to have been the best witnessed since 1930. The reviews report that the same situation was witnessed in many different sections of the country. Special sales and the wide diversity of offerings kept the stores filled, while the spring-like weather that prevailed for most of the week did much to draw out the crowds and stimulate purchasing.

The heavy volume of business done at retail had a driving effect on the wholesale and jobbing trades. Many stores had been estimating their requirements closely, and with the unexpected consumer rush reaching record proportions, they were forced to put in rush orders for immediate delivery in order to fill in depleted lines.

STOCKS CLIMB ON CHEERFUL OUTLOOK

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—Stock market sentiment was mildly cheerful today and prices, as a whole, gave indications of looking upward.

While cotton, silver and rubber improved, grains were a little nervous. Wheat, corn and oats were off moderately, but rye did better. Bonds were featureless. The dollar firmed in foreign exchange markets.

Although trading was relatively quiet, rail and motor shares were in some demand. Santa Fe got up 2 points and Chrysler, General Motors, Nash and Auburn gained fractions to around a point. A number of specialties, including those of the aircraft group, were quite lively at small advances. Du Pont, Seaboard Oil, Western Union and Postal Telegraph preferred moved up a point or more each. Armour of Illinois preferred got up 3. Such issues as U. S. Steel, Goodyear, American Can, Johns-Manville, International Telephone, Radio and Montgomery Ward were slightly higher. The power and light stocks were easier.

Although inflationary psychology appeared to be less in evidence, brokerage houses reported that it still was a market factor. Analysts in touch with Washington felt that the Dies silver bill probably would be passed, but with the President being given prerogatives by which he can enforce, or not enforce, the law.

The financial district, while continuing work over the Stock Exchange control bill, was pleased with the announcement of Chairman Rayburn of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee that he would inaugurate a move for a limited revision of the securities act. It was thought that the principal changes would be in the liability provisions of the law.

A few optimists expressed hopes that the bill for federal regulation of stock speculation would be altered before coming up for final passage, but the concensus in Wall street is that a law "with teeth in it" is virtually a certainty. There were some doubts, however, that an accord between the House and Senate Committee would be reached in time to get the measure before Congress this week.

Further confirmation of the progress of recovery was seen in the statement of Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, that the improvement throughout the country was reflected through the fact that the organization's expenditures for the 1934 fiscal year would be some 500 million dollars under estimates.

Newspaper Ads Help Life Underwriters

DENVER. — (INS.) — Life insurance companies are looking forward to one of the best years in their history, according to James A. McClain, New York insurance man. McClain, who is in charge of publicity for the National Association of Life Underwriters, attributed this largely to the fact that the association is using newspaper advertising exclusively throughout the country.

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

The rasp of the bell went like a knife through the stark, pulsating quiet. They both sprang to the door.

Pippin said with bewildered panic: "Oh, mother, it's you!"

"Weren't you expecting me?"

"Why yes, of course." She gave a quick, nervous laugh. "We're waiting for Vivian."

"Is she very late?"

Chickie looked at the two chalky faces: at the haggard boy, leaning against the door with such a frightened, let-down air: at Pippin trying to smile.

"When did she go?"

"We don't know."

"Is it so very unusual for Vivian to leave without making explanations?"

"But you see, Mrs. Ramm, she told Pippin she was going for a long ride with me. . . ."

"And the moment I was gone, mother, she sent Sherry away."

"She told me she wanted to sleep," the boy added. "It seems strange."

"She got us both out of the way, mother. Deliberately."

Chickie Reads Faces

Chickie read their young, devastated faces. Vivian gone: Sherry's bright youth shed like a discarded garment: Pippin needing her so urgently.

She stood there quietly, asking casual questions, but all the while remembering a time when Vivian stayed with them for a week-end. Sherry came to take her dancing. When he entered the room Vivian's whole being sprang into a heightened, brimming kind of life. They merely clasped hands; but Chickie, with a remembrance that made her long to weep, had known how completely the boy owned Vivian's heart. Something touching about it—something pitiful. Now it was ended.

The whole thing swept with a little sick horror into Chickie's mind. She asked questions; they disclosed a little here; told a little there. Then Chickie had it all.

She took off her hat, running her hand slowly across her forehead: "It won't do to get alarmed. There are so many places where Vivian might loiter. Aren't there some quiet rooms in the library where she may have gone to think it all over?"

Pippin cried, strident: "She has thought it over. Mother, we're frightened. We think Vivian has gone away and will do some desperate thing."

But no—they mustn't do that. They mustn't let anyone know. Any moment now, Vivian may be opening the door. She made them fix the dinner.

Pippin opened the bundles. She cut the alligator pears. Then she shoved the things from her. "It's no use, mother. We can't go through with a bluff like this." She turned against the wall, hiding her face in her hands.

Make Brave Effort

They made a brave effort to eat. The phone rang. They became taut like stretched wires and jumped to answer. Paula Mead needed Vivian to help her with a math problem; Sue Gordon wanted to come down and study history; Dick Hazlett was very anxious for a date. After each of these calls, they faced each other, limp, white, exhausted.

It was 8 o'clock; it was 9. Then it was 10. Vivian hadn't come. There was no word of her.

Chickie went back to that bleak night when she had so wanted to die. She remembered the gas tank, stained red like old blood, and the stacks of lumber where she had knelt, praying for courage to drop down and be drowned in the black, forbidding waters. She had wound her hands around the cross beams and let herself down: the wind and the night closing about her.

A thing like that might be happening to Vivian now. She closed her eyes on the stark picture. It is not easy for the young to die. Vivian would return. Beaten and sunk but returning. She would lift her up—oh how she would lift her up!

Thinks of Self

"There's nothing we can do."

Yes—appalling to be so helpless . . . but where could they look; what could they accomplish? Rush blindly into the night, calling her name? By what miracle could they find the one in ten thousand places she might be?

"But if she should be near—and we haven't looked—we haven't tried. And tomorrow—"

Chickie looked away from the boy's ravaged face. She thought of her own desolate pilgrimage and the bitter home-coming, wrists bloody, dress sopping with water.

She said, gentle: "When Vivian returns—if she has attempted something desperate, will she want the world to know?"

He went back to the desk; sat there wtih his elbows ground into the blotter and his face hidden in his hands. He couldn't shut out Vivian's eyes; her fingers touching his cheek; her lips kissing him goodby. He tried to stop thought, but it came recurrently.

Sends Sherry Home

At 1 o'clock Chickie went up and put her arms around him. She said softly: "Poor boy." She thought of Jon and how easily things may happen. She tried to comfort Sherry. Then she sent him home.

She didn't want his name dragged in; didn't want the talk. That much, at least, they could prevent.

Pippin sank into a chair and let her head fall back against the cushions. She said, weeping: "She won't do that!"

It grew cold. Pippin's teeth chattered. Helena said: "You may as well go to bed."

She fancied Vivian wandering desperate through the night—muttering to herself—gathering the courage. How terrible to feel you have to die!

Her thoughts ran stricken into the dark. If only we could find her; only let her know how safe she'd be; only reach a hand and draw her back.

PICTORIAL EDUCATION RESUMES TOMORROW

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Guess you all know what that is. Two or three fellows are the "hares." They run through the country, leaving a trail of paper bits over the fields and through the woods. The "hounds" follow after them and try to catch them before they have reached another place, two or three miles away. It's like a cross-country race.

If you can't go out into the country to play this game, you can run through the city streets, and the "hares" must draw small arrows with chalk on the pavement so that the hounds" will know what direction they have gone. But if you have to draw the arrows, make them small so that you won't mark up the pavements too much.

It's a good idea when you are playing hare and hounds to make the goal the house of one of your members, where you can have a little party, maybe, when you all bet there. And eat some good things as a reward for your chase.

Now here's a pleasant note from Joseph Odom, of 1830 Cliff street, Pittsburgh. He writes:

"While I am just joining the club I would like to present a theme poem for the Juniors. So here it is to show you how I appreciate it.

"I love the Junior Patrol,
I will try to keep its pledge
And if I do not obey it
I will be under the honest ledge."

And this letter is from Janet Jolliffe, of 1853 Noblestown road, Pittsburgh. She says:

"I got an early promotion in school. I am now in 5-A. I read the Junior Patrol in the Sun-Telegraph and I think it is very interesting. The day I got promoted mother gave me 15 cents. I have saved a lot of money since I started saving. I am going to send some pledges from my friends."

We're glad you like the Junior Patrol, Janet, and we will send your brother Charles a badge and membership card, too. Also, we'll be looking for some more pledges from you for your friends. We would like to see you start a Junior Patrol club in your neighborhood. It's a lot of fun holding meetings and doing things together.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Dispatch from Sofia, Bulgaria, reports that local officials burglarized a theater in order to collect back taxes.

The competition might run the other criminals out of business.

FEARLESS JOURNALISM

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

We were sitting over there in Will Clay's chair, at the corner barber shop, Friday evening, when Rev. Newcomb's car struck the S. S. coal truck, on the southwest corner. Everybody marveled at the way the car knocked the contents of the coal truck all over the pavement. It was past paper time. Next day we forgot it, but we'll bet that preacher didn't forget it.

HEART OF THE ROSE

Heart of the rose!
Thrilled with relief
For the comfort it gives!
Nobody knows
How the wide world is sobbing,
Filled with the grief
For some kindness that lives!

Hunger and thirst
Are of mildest conception
Unto the heart
That is bleeding and torn;
Ready to burst,
At cold-shoulder reception
In the world mart,
Without selfishness shorn.

All aglow in its beauty,
Passed to a soul
Who is downcast and sad,
Helps, in the rush
Of the line of his duty,
Nearing his goal;
Such a rose makes him glad!

The Beauty Box

Beige is a trying color. It is coming in again, especially for coats. String beige and chalk beige are characterless, need bright makeup. All tones that contain yellow drain the complexion of natural coloring. So if the new beige frock or coat is in the wardrobe, put it on, have experiments with factory blushes and lipstick. You'll be able to use quite brilliant tints and, with the yallery costume, you'll be the better looking for them.

The finger wave has pretty nearly put the water wave with combs out of business. Yet there are women who stick to the old-time method, find it convenient and satisfactory. To achieve the finger wave oneself is difficult. But if there is already established a wave pattern—one given by nature or bestowed by the permanent wave machine—it is possible to anchor down each undulation with a comb, let the hair dry, get swell results.

Step-by-Step Guide Simplifies Embroidery

A set of pillow cases and a sheet decorated with a touch of embroidery in dainty pastel colors can add a decorative note to any bedroom. This design carried out in outline stitch, French knots, darning stitch, lazy daisy and rambler rose—all very simple to do—can be used on towels and scarf ends as well as for bed linens. The dogwood flower, outlined in delicate pink, is set off by means of the darning stitch which fills out the background. The French knots, with touches of tiny flowers, form a frame for the dogwood medallions. This design can be carried out in a variety of colors, in two shades of one color, or in white with one color. Its use is greatly simplified by the Step-by-Step guide which shows by means of illustrations each step in the embroidering and making of a variety of articles to which the design is suited as well as color schemes and yardage requirements.

Pattern 666 comes to you with a transfer pattern of two motifs 5½x17 inches and one motif 5½x23 inches besides the three scalloped edges illustrated and the Step-by-Step guide.

Send fifteen (15) cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Hints for the Home Owner

Nobody knows just how many times you should paint the shack. Start with blue. Then hide it with a coat of pink. When the pink dries hide that with a layer of green. You can conceal the green with a nice top layer of red.

By this time the blue should be well plowed under. You can simplify matters by throwing a lighted match in the can of green. Save the surface and you save all. But you will have to carry grandma out.

The garage can be any color. Especially if it is portable. If you have a portable garage on the premises it is your own fault. Why not roll it down a steep hill?

The garden is important. Justly so in rainy weather when most of it is on the porch door mat.

Why not sow the flower seeds on the mat and parlor rug? Then you can bring the sub-soil in on your feet.

The suburban walk of mossy stones is quite colonial and beautiful. They are slippery but sporty.

This will save you the trouble of consulting an architect. However, any architect will give you favorable terms. Fifty dollars down, and sue you for the rest.

"The suburban home should be magnificent at this stage of th season," warns Prof. Lunkscape. "A little care and attention is a that it requires."

"Shingles are nice on the roof, but not on the body," he adds.

Power Ring Activities

Legislators' Subservience to Public Utilities Should Be Investigated.

The letters of a New York state senator introduced before the Federal Trade Commission, showing the receipt of money and pointing to the rendition of service to public utility companies, have created a sensation throughout the country.

Not that the link which has long existed in every state of the Union between the utility interests and our law makers was ever a matter of doubt. Not that the servile pliancy of legislative bodies to the wishes of the Power Trust was unsuspected. Such connection and subservience have been a matter of common knowledge for many years.

They have been written in the public consciousness by the uninterrupted thwarting of all attempts at genuine regulation, whether by better laws or better supervision, through the political power of the utility interests in every state capital.

This sinister alliance has been established with almost the force of an admission, by the uniform failure of all bills seeking to limit excessive rates or to curb the exploitation of both consumer and investor by the speculative financiers of the public utility business.

But now come three letters from Warren T. Thayer, a member of the State Senate of New York, which put the matter upon a footing very different from mere suspicion.

Writing on the stationery of the New York Senate, Senator Thayer in one letter mentions the adjournment of the Legislature and his return to his home.

"If at any time I can be of FURTHER SERVICE TO YOU," he adds, "please do not hesitate to call upon me.

"I hope MY WORK during the PAST SESSION WAS SATISFACTORY TO YOUR COMPANY, not so much for the new legislation enacted, but from the fact that MANY DETRIMENTAL BILLS, which were introduced, WE WERE ABLE TO KILL IN MY COMMITTEE."

In another letter addressed to C. A. Greenidge, care of the J. G. White Management Corporation of New York City, one of the operating companies for the Associated Gas and Electric Company in its upstate power plants, the same Senator, referring to certain bills in the New York Senate, said:

"After you have examined them and IF YOU FEEL that they should be HELD UP IN THE SENATE, you had BETTER CALL ME on the phone at Chateaugay (the Senator's home) either Friday or Saturday."

Little wonder that the demand is now heard for a formal investigation by a committee of the Legislature!

One of the Senator's colleagues demands the institution of impeachment proceedings.

Of course there should be an investigation of the alliance between the power interests and their obedient tools in the Legislature's membership. Its existence is not open to doubt.

The reality of such an alliance has been repeatedly charged. Three months ago, in a brave sensational speech at Utica, the Republican state chairman, W. Kingsland Macy, called upon the Republican members of the assembly to break away from this alliance and to "come clean" as sincere representatives of the people and the public interest.

There was some insincere splutter by Old Guard Republicans about bringing Mr. Macy before the assembly to substantiate his charges. There was a move, which was transparently insincere, for a perfunctory and whitewashing investigation.

The public easily saw through it, and recognized that it was a mere gesture. So did Chairman Macy who said the only investigation he would countenance would be a GENUINE INVESTIGATION by a duly appointed legislative committee, with power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of evidence.

By one of those singular "breaks" of good fortune which revive confidence in the truth—confidence that truth is not without powerful, although unseen, allies—THESE LETTERS NOW REACH THE LIGHT OF DAY.

They supply chapter and verse—compelling reason for AT LAST a genuine and effective exposure of the whole mess.

SUCH AN INVESTICATION CANNOT BE AVOIDED!

The disclosures are peculiarly timely in connection with Gov. Lehman's gallant fight for justice to the consumer and rate-payer, so long helpless in the combined grip of the utility companies and their subservient creatures in the Legislature.

NO LONGER CAN SILENCE KEEP MUM! NO LONGER CAN GUILT SIT TIGHT! The tactics of evasion and "the huddle" have broken down. THE CASE IS NOW WIDE OPEN!

Here at last are FACTS—facts to begin with, facts to go on with, facts which puncture the hollow disclaimers with which the Power Trust has met accusations in the past—accusations which were true, but not specific.

Let the Governor and the honest members of the New York Legislature, whether Repulican or Democratic, now put their hand to the plow and make the furrow straight and deep.

The revelations in these letters constitute A GREAT "BREAK" FOR THE PEOPLE AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST—throughout the country and in every part of it.

The sinister alliance between power and politics—ELECTRIC POWER AND POLLUTED POLITICS—reaches into every state in the union.

IN EVERY COMMUNITY ITS BALEFUL EFFECTS ARE FELT!

Wrongly Accused

"Pennsylvania Dutch" Are Not Responsible for Witchcraft Murders, Col. Shoemaker Says.

Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, editor of the Altoona Tribune declares that the "Pennsylvania Dutch" are not responsible for the witchcraft murders that have occurred in late years in the vicinity of York and Reading and, most recently, at Pottsville. As he is one of the foremost authorities on the "Pennsylvania Dutch" his statement carries weight.

These so-called "hex" murders have been cases in which the persons slain were called "hexes" (German for witches) and accused of having bewitched the slayers. Killing them, it was pleaded in extenuation, was the only way of breaking the spell.

Col. Shoemaker asserts that the names of those involved in these affairs are not "Pennsylvania Dutch" names, and it is evident that they are comparatively recent arrivals from Europe. They have borrowed the word "hex" from the "Pennsylvania Dutch" people among whom they have taken up their abode, but their beliefs and fears are really modern European superstition transplanted on Pennsylvania soil.

Col. Shoemaker points out that although the "Pennsylvania Dutch" have been in the State for centuries we did not begin to hear of witchcraft murders until a comparatively few years ago.

His argument is logical and impressive, and it is a satisfaction to know that the "Pennsylvania Dutch" are not responsible for these crimes and that they are not typical of Pennsylvania.

Thousands of years from now posterity will read, in letters of granite, the history OF America BY America.

The text will be carved in the rocky surface of Mt. Rushmore, in the Black Hills of Dakota, which Gutzon Borglum, the eminent sculptor, is shaping into the Republic's "everlasting memorial."

And, in order that this text may be the best that the country can produce, the Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers are conducting the nation-wide contest which already has engaged thousands of citizens, young and old.

It will interest you as it has interested so many of your fellow Americans.

'Big Four's' Latest Blunder In Air Mail Contracts

By James T. Williams, Jr.

IT must be a welcome relief to President Roosevelt to get even a fortnight's respite from the company of those costly advisers who misled his administration into the tragic blunder that dates from Postmaster General Farley's edict of the 9th of last February. This was the edict in which the Postmaster General proclaimed his cancellation of all domestic air mail contracts. He canceled them without due process of law. He gave the holders of those contracts no chance to be heard in their defense. He condemned and convicted them and their companies and he punished not only these companies and their officials but nearly half a million stockholders without giving to the stockholders, the companies or their officials that day in court which is the due of every citizen under the flag.

This edict of Mr. Farley appears to have been issued at the instigation of Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, and Senator Black, of Alabama. These two Senators are old-time enemies of American air transport. They have been fighting for a long time to deprive it of that federal aid without which it could not have become the eighth wonder of the world. For that is what it was until the edict of Mr. Farley shook the foundations of this magnificent American achievement.

* * *

Approved By Attorney General

BUT this edict of Mr. Farley, instigated, as it appears to have been, by Senators McKellar and Black, was not issued until it had been approved by Attorney General Cummings.

This is why Senator McKellar, Senator Black, Postmaster General Farley and Attorney General Cummings are known today as "the Big Four" in the wrecking of the federal air mail, the crippling of American air transport and the paralyzing of the Army Air Corps.

Since that first edict was issued the administration has stumbled from one blunder into another in the twofold effort to save the political reputation of the Big Four among the President's advisers in this ill-starred adventure and to revive the federal air mail.

After canceling all domestic air mail contracts without due process of law the Big Four's next step was to hatch the scheme of having the Army Air Corps fly the mail. This decision was arrived at without any consultation with the Secretary of War or any opportunity by the general staff to study the problem.

After 11 officers of the Army Air Corps had been sent to an unnecessary death because they were ordered to fly the mail before they could familiarize themselves with the route or without being supplied with suitable planes and equipment, the third step taken was to suspend the federal air mail altogether in an effort to stop the slaughter in the skies and to improvise suitable equipment for the Army fliers to perform the non-military mission of carrying the mail.

* * *

Postmaster General's Latest Edict

SENATOR M'KELLAR and Senator Black then led off with the fourth step by sponsoring legislation to restore the federal air mail to private operation upon condition that the companies and officials blacklisted by the Big Four should be barred from bidding if they attempted to prove their innocence in any court of the allegations of fraud and collusion brought against them.

When an outraged public sentiment forced senatorial protests against this tyrannical proposal there was another series of secret consultations in which the Big Four participated.

Now comes another edict from Postmaster Farley in which he undertakes to do by executive order that which Senator McKellar and Senator Black have shown their inability to do by legislation.

The latest Farley edict calls for new bids for temporary contracts to carry the mails, but bars from bidding for these contracts the companies and officials whom Postmaster General Farley in his edict of last February condemned convicted and punished without a hearing.

Until President Roosevelt returns from his vacation the Big Four among his air mail advisers will apparently be supreme in the skies unless Congress clips their wings. How long the Congress and the country will permit the power of the Big Four's misrule to go uncurbed only time will tell.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 2.—Diary: Betimes and found Grace Drayton's original drawing of her soup kids, which I hung at once. Then with my wife about a mirror-topped dining table and being messy-minded ordered it without asking the price. So to breakfast and saw Will and Inez Haynes Irwin across the room.

Home and grinding out my chunk, a gritty effort, and listened to the emotional blood-letting and spiritual dram drinking of a political debate over the wireless. And all of a sudden the girl Miranda could not find the dog but a search revealed him asleep in a closet, a mighty fright.

To Count John Perdicari's dinner for E. D. and Lollita Coblentz at the Madison, the table a bower of flowers built around a California palm. Later on to a midnight spread, talking to Rex Cole, Robert Rubin and Joe Weber. Home late reading Margot Asquith's book about herself.

* * *

Sudden thought: The only plays I remember George Jean Nathan ever praising extravagantly were those of Eugene O'Neil and the colored-revue, "Shuffle Along."

* * *

In excess of curiosity, I wandered through the lobby of a midtown hotel, reputedly a rendezvous for big shots of the underworld, the other evening. About the loungers was a barbered gloss and grim tautness of gamblers grouped together. Two or three well rouged ladies offered sly and provocative quiet flitting smiles that suggested a caper. A derbied gentleman I suspect was the house dick was exchanging offhand pleasantries with a pert mistress of the newsstand. But the anesthesia of adventure soon wore off. I realized it was just another hotel lobby, unfortunate in that several roundups of crooks had taken place there. Almost every big hotel has its quota of criminals.

* * *

In another lunatic seizure to find life in the raw I once occupied a room for the night in a dingy inn on the roaring waterfront of Antwerp. Directly across a black strip of alley from a bedroom window was a lamp-lit sand-floored dive, where drunken sailors to the rasp of a gramophone were indulging in a salterello. Later a cafe awning caught fire from a dropped cigaret and there were several street brawls. I finally fell into a sound sleep and morning papers revealed that one of the most hideous murders and robberies of the decade happened amid the magnificent splendors of the ace hotel of the city.

Walkers around the gravel path of the Central Park Reservoir seldom desert. Andrew Carnegie continued his constitutionals there until the last. George M. Cohan, rain or snow, never fails to have his daily turn when in town. Edna Ferber, too, is a devotee. As are also Nathan Burkan, the lawyer; Bert Lytell, the actor; Theodore Dreiser and Pierre Cartier, the jeweler. All the walkers seem caught in the bliss of clear thinking, never looking right or left. Now and then they will stop in sudden clench, walk to the rail and gaze over the city and go plodding on. Sometimes a squirrel flashes out on a bough, looks down quizzically and as though sensing intrusion, dances away. But that's the only interruption.

In an after-dark walk along Upper Riverside Drive with an untethered mind jostling the stars, I suddenly stopped to look back for the dog. After a while I was conscious of a huddled pair on a bench a few steps away in dim silhouette. A voice called, "All right, we are necking. So what?" I blundered on, still clutching at immortality's outer hem. But feeling an 18-karat boob.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

What's Good for Sensitive People?

We were talking about sensitive children—how to treat them. These "public speaking courses" in Junior High School started it. With youngsters making speeches before the classes and the other youngsters criticizing them. Telling them to take their hands out of their pockets. Stop wiggling. What's the big idea of snuffling? And mumbling? Why didn't they comb their hair before they came?

Was that "fair or kind to a sensitive child of 12 or 13?" Wasn't it dangerous to let youngsters of their own age criticize their looks and manners? Would it "drive them back into themselves"—make them permanently timid? Shouldn't they be spared such ordeals until they were 17 or 18, at least?

The debate split into two groups. The three men and one of the women—a woman lawyer—said such sessions were great for youngsters. The other four women hotly contended that they were "cruel" and "bound to make them sensitive for life." Whereupon the argument swung into a general discussion of sensitiveness.

What was sensitiveness?

"By common consent, it was agreed to eliminate that form of sensitiveness which was merely unusual receptivity—an expression of high tension, intelligence or artistic talent—and to stick to the general understanding of the world, "touchiness"—a quick and painful reaction to criticism, conflict, any humiliating experience. So what was that kind of sensitiveness?)

Was it a sign of a delicate spirit, or of a pampered and cowardly one?

Wasn't sensitiveness really a mixture of fear and egotism, and weren't we all "naturally sensitive?" (Unanimously agreed by the men and the lady lawyer. Contemptuously denied by the women whose mass opinion was that "a lot of people didn't have any more feelings than pigs.")

"But what difference does it really make," said one of the men, "whether people are sensitive because they're 'finer clay' or because they're yellow, peevish, spoiled, rotten and stuck on themselves? In any case, they've got to live in this world with other people and share the general lot.

"They certainly can't go through life by unique rules, expecting a special consideration and exemptions. They'll have to learn to take things as they come. Then shouldn't they begin to learn as soon as possible?

"In fact, isn't it imperative that they begin to learn when they are very young? If you let a youngster grow up for 17 years thinking he's different—coddling and protecting him against criticism—aren't you going to have a devil of a time trying to knock that notion out of his head at 18? Isn't it crueler to do it then than it would have been to let his school chums break it to him gradually?

"Aren't children, in these matters, really the best judges and trainers of other children? It's notorious that an only child is a general nuisance to himself and anyone else, whereas the children in a large family are usually good sports.

"After all, why should people be permitted to go through life being touchy over trifles any more than with any other objectionable habit? For isn't sensitiveness just that — an objectionable habit which no one has a right to cultivate?"

But there you have the pros and cons. Do you know a sensitive person? Or are you one? Then think them over.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

A Straight Tip for Gals

The mature woman is coming into her own, again. I mean into her popularity with men. The widow in her thirties—and even in her forties—is snitching "all the sad young men" from the young girls.

* * *

You'll see it wherever you go. At teas, cocktail parties and even at the country clubs, you will find the younger and handsomer men flocking around the widows and divorcees and semi-detached matrons, leaving only the overripe "daddies" and the half-baked college boys to the young gels.

And there's a REASON! Several personable young man have revealed it to me.

* * *

During the "prosperity" decade, the flapper held all the limelight, and crowded every woman over twenty-five or thirty out of the picture. No man could SEE a woman of thirty unless she was surrounded by money-bags. She was just a "horse-hair sofa or a plush album!"

* * *

That was a sad shock to those who remembered the one-time glory of the widow, and her unquestioned prowess as a heart-collector whom debutantes feared and hated. But in those days, debutantes were shy—awkward and insipid—ate bread-and-butter girls—while the sophisticated widow was caviar-and-wine.

* * *

But the young thing of today has no such excuse for losing her place in the sun. She is never green, shy or insipid; in fact she is SO sophisticated that she almost makes her mother feel simple-minded. No! If an attractive girl finds her evenings getting long and lonesome, it is probably her own fault.

"Taking a young girl about," writes a Bachelor-of-Thirty, "is too great a strain on a man's pocketbook, in these hard times. And dragging her around to night-spots until the wee small hours is too great a strain on his nervous energy. Yet so many girls still seem to expect those things.

* * *

"A woman who is old enough to know what a tension the average man is working under all day, in these hectic times, is more understanding and far easier to please. She doesn't have to be 'entertained'—nor even made love to—if a fellow is worried. And isn't?

* * *

"It is a delicious relaxation to spend an evening with a woman who is willing to sit at home and let you tell her all about your business troubles while she mixes you a highball from her own cellarette. That's why lots of men prefer mature women to orchidaceous young girls, who have the idea that they were put here just to be admired, entertained and strung with diamonds."

And that's THAT! The older woman is less expensive, less demanding and a lot more sympathetic and understanding. She has probably had all the dancing and whoopee parties she wants, and possibly all the husbands she wants. And a young man feels that he is safer with her than with a girl whose eyes spell "Object, Matrimony."

Very few young men who are making their way up in this worst of all possible worlds, have a lot of time, money and energy to spend on ANY woman. And the other kind of men don't count. Take a tip from the widows, gels—and look to your laurels!

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Do you ever give your mind a housecleaning?

As a storehouse, it needs it.

Many ideas should be thrown out, the basis of certain knowledge should be repaired, and new and modern thoughts given room.

There are many things in that mind which should not be given any further consideration.

In every life there have been experiences, displeasing, irritating and angering.

There are thoughts of revenge, a desire to "get even" for some true or imaginary injury.

But worse than all these, there are the memories of evil things which we have done, or disgraceful things in which we have participated.

It is not an easy job to completely obliterate the memory of our own wrongdoing.

There are so many good and pleasing things to think about, it is surprising that so many of us waste time thinking of sordid matters.

Mind is the directing force; whether joy or sorrow fills the mind depends upon where the mind dwells.

Human Side of the News

Retail Trade Improves, and This May Be Known as the First Year of the Post-Depression Era

By Edwin C. Hill

THE signs accumulate that this year of grace will go down in history as the first of the post-depression era. From all sections, and especially from the South and West, come reports of increases in trade which almost stump the analysts. Whereas, a year ago, shelves were loaded and prices were ridiculous, retail trade today is so brisk that shortages exist in certain lines, and prices have so increased that our merchants are a bit concerned about their getting too far ahead of the consumer.

This Easter parade was no bargain counter affair. The bonnets, the top coats and the spring tweeds with their NRA stamps, were worn with the additional pride which must come from the knowledge that they represent the prices of normalcy with encouraging profits to the merchants and adequate wages for the workers who made them.

One cloud mars our blue skies—the black one of widespread labor unrest. And yet, to my mind, even the labor uncertainty is not altogether a bad sign. Old Deal or New Deal, human nature remains the same and history swings around in the same old orbit. Just as the robin has been the harbinger of spring down through the ages, so has a major capital-labor issue been the sign that better times have arrived. We have that issue today and it transcends by far such fleeting questions as to who shall carry the airmail, or who shall build the St. Lawrence Waterway.

Wagner Bill Accentuates Crisis

HOWEVER, there is no use discounting the seriousness of the situation arising from the attempts to unionize the automobile and steel industries, a situation accentuated by the bill of Senator Wagner, of New York, which would outlaw the company union and most likely spell death to the principle of the open shop. There is today every indication that, from this time on, the capital-labor issue will transcend all others in the Roosevelt administration. One has only to watch the storm brewing over the Wagner "Labor Disputes Act" to prophesy this.

The Senator from New York has long been a champion of the working classes. He is very close to the President and unless there is some direct statement to the contrary, the legislation which he proposes is, and will be recognized as, that which President Roosevelt sponsors. Therefore, Washington and the rest of the country believes today that "the Labor Disputes Act" is the administration's New Deal for labor.

Senator Wagner calls his measure "A bill to equalize the bargaining power of employers and employes, to encourage the amicable settlement of disputes between employers and employes and to create a National Labor Board."

"My bill," says Senator Wagner, "forbids any employer to foster, or participate in, or influence any organization which deals with problems that should be covered by a genuine labor union."

* * *

Measure Would End Company Unions

THE language of the Senator is perfectly clear. He means that there will be no more company unions, and that trade unions, such as we know them, with special officers and delegates, shall be recognized wherever any group of workers shall organize them. The steel industry and the automobile industry are out already, bitterly and defiantly against this legislation.

"Your bill," they say to the Senator, "means a universal closed shop. It destroys the rights and the initiative of the individual. It disrupts the industrial welfare of the nation and destroys the friendly relationships between employer and employe."

Thus the lines are drawn. Hearings on the bill are under way, even now, in Washington. If it gets before Congress in its present form, the country may look for a controversy such as we have not had for years and before which such political issues as the Gold Standard, Tariffs and the N. R. A. will pale into significance. It is difficult to see how party ranks can stand the strain on the clean cut issue of the open shop against compulsory unionization. Protagonists will read the question as that of the Old Deal versus the New Deal. But it will be more than that, and will be so recognized.

For instance, what about the Democratic South, which is still the backbone of the administration and must be counted on to furnish the votes for administration policies? The antagonism of the South to unionization is deeply rooted because of the racial problem and the industrial set-up. It will be interesting to note the votes of industrial Alabama, North Carolina and Tennessee on the rollcalls.

It is true, as Senator Wagner points out, that many, if not most company unions, are mockeries. But it is true also, as his opponents assert, that labor unions have not been free from graft and racketeering. I will hazard the guess that the debate over the Wagner bill and its disposition will make real history.

ISN'T IT SO?
